

Charges Labor Board Tried to Interfere With Press Freedom

Burke Appears at Hearing Before Senate Group

CITES INSTANCES

Wants Probe of Record In Pennsylvania Case

Washington —(P)— Senator Burke (D-Neb.) charged before a senate judiciary subcommittee today that the national labor relations board had made "several attempts" to violate the freedom of speech and the press.

Burke, pressing for a senatorial probe of his charges that the board is biased, listed several cases in which he said the rights of the press were invaded.

Senator Burke said the record of the labor board's investigation of the Stackpole Carbon company case at St. Marys, Pa., should be "investigated by some senate committee."

He read from the testimony of Harry T. O'Brien, editor of the Daily Press at St. Marys, in which a labor board examiner said, referring to an article in O'Brien's paper attacking the CIO:

"Now this man (referring to O'Brien) has complete power here to select, edit and run whatever he pleases. What I am trying to do is to see how he exercises that power and whether he consciously tried to help the one and withhold aid from the other."

Sets Threat to Press

Burke said the examiner's attitude constituted a threat to the rights of a free press. He said O'Brien had been asked to reveal the name of the contributor of the article.

Burke said the labor board "lost its head" when it suspended Harry W. Barclay, editor of Mill and Factory, to bring in a story in his New York trade magazine about the board's inquiry into unfair labor practice charges against the Weirton Steel company.

The senator read a deposition he said was made by Fred A. Moore, of the Dearborn, Mich., Herald, a weekly newspaper, in which Moore charged a labor board agent with biased statements and questions about an article he published concerning the Ford brotherhood labor organization.

Moore said in the deposition the labor board's agent had attempted to gain an admission from him that there was some connection between the Ford Motor company advertising and the publication of the story.

Fined and Sentenced In Fatal Auto Accident

Madison —(P)—Edward Hauser, 30, of Madison, driver of an automobile involved in a fatal accident last March, was sentenced by Circuit Judge Alvin C. Reis yesterday to serve three months in the Dane county jail and to pay a fine of $125. If the fine is not paid, Hauser will serve an additional 20 days.

The judge imposed for reckless driving, $100 of the fine for driving while intoxicated, and $25 for driving on the wrong side of the road.

Hauser's car struck three men grouped around a Dane county squad car March 20. One of the men, Raymond Wermuth of Shorewood Hills, was injured fatally.

Two Trainmen Killed In Boiler Explosion

Marshalltown, Iowa —(P)— Two trainmen were killed and a third injured when the boiler on a Great Western engine exploded early today 15 miles southwest of here. The cause of the explosion was not determined immediately.

The dead are Eugene Holmes, Des Moines, Iowa, engineer, and William Krautz, Des Moines, fireman. Seventeen cars were derailed.

Two Killed When Auto And Street Car Collide

Chicago —(P)—Miss Ruth Slawson, 35, and her brother-in-law, Alexander Faeh, 55, were killed today when their automobile collided with a street car on the south side and caught fire. There were no passengers on the street car.

This Was Not A Social Climb

Coming home from work, very tired, August Standinger trudged up the stairs to his third floor apartment in Hoboken, N. J., last evening, searched his pockets, found no keys. So he trudged down again, called a policeman who phoned the fire department which sent a truck that raised an extension-ladder and helped Standinger climb up and in through a window. Tokio Government Prepares For Another Country Other Than China, Minister Says

PLANS CONFAB

Washington —(P)— A high administration official predicted today that David E. Lillenthal (above) and Wendell L. Wilkie would get together soon to discuss the sale of large private power utilities in the south to the Tennessee Valley authority. The TVA board has authorized Lillenthal, one of its members, to negotiate for the purchase of units he deems useful.

Opposition Seen To Confirmation Of R. H. Jackson

Most Senators Believe Nomination Will Receive Approval

Washington —(P)—Some opposition to confirmation of Robert H. Jackson as solicitor general developed today in the senate judiciary committee, but expressions from most senators indicated the nomination would be approved.

Senators Burke (D-Neb.) and King (D-Utah) called for hearings on the nomination. They said they wanted to question Jackson about his testimony before the house judiciary committee in the investigation of Federal Judge Geiger of Milwaukee.

"I would like to ask him," Burke said, "about his statement intimating he approved the use of criminal action to force desired results in civil matters."

Burke referred to Jackson's testimony that the justice department had found it desirable to use the threat of criminal prosecution under anti-trust laws preliminary to negotiation of consent decrees.

'Regrets' Appointment

"Jackson's extreme views would seem to make his appointment undesirable," King said. "Whether I will vote against him will depend upon developments, but it is an appointment that I regret."

Burke commented not only on Jackson's views before the house committee, but also on his recent speeches.

"I would find it difficult voting for anyone," he said, "who held the view that the depression was deliberately caused by business interests."

Among senators who said the nomination was "all right" were Pittman (D-Nev.), Hatch (D-N.M.), Bailey (D-N.C.), Harrison (D-Miss.), Norris (I-Neb.), and Townsend (R-Del.).

Committee Fails To Agree on Bill

'Progress' Made on Plan to Abolish Bank Holding Companies

Washington —(P)—An interdepartmental banking committee apparently failed today to reach a complete agreement on proposals to abolish bank holding companies.

After the meeting, a spokesman would say only that "progress" had been made. He indicated the subject would be discussed at future meetings.

William O. Douglas, chairman of the securities commission, who recently suggested action to make it easier for small business men to raise capital, took part in the discussions.

Beforehand it was considered likely that this subject might be discussed, but later it developed that it was not.

Others present at the meeting were Secretary Morgenthau, Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation; Marvin S. Eccles, chairman of the federal reserve board; J. F. T. O'Connor, controller of the currency; Marshall Diggs, deputy controller of the currency; Herman Oliphant, treasury counsel, and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Wayne C. Taylor.

Douglas, in a recent letter to congressmen, said studied by the securities commission showed it was expensive and difficult for business men to sell securities in less than $1,000,000 lots.

Tokio —(P)— The war with China has reached so critical a stage, War Minister General Gen Sugiyama told the nation's parliament today, that Japan must now "prepare for a country other than China."

Replying to a flurry of questioning by diet members, the general urged for the second time within a week that an increased army be thrown into the conflict.

He acknowledged that "the current incident gradually is assuming greater proportions and the situation rapidly is becoming more grave."

"Foreign supplies are entering China through Mongolia, Canton and Indo-China," he said. "I believe the volume is considerable, but accurate figures are unobtainable."

"In any event the imperial army holds the key to settlement. Taking warning of experiences obtained from the Chinese incident, and also in connection with this new situation developing, I believe the army forces must be increased."

Prepare for Contingencies

"The question has been asked if it will be necessary to strengthen the army after termination of the incident. We are mapping plans carefully to meet all contingencies."

And, he concluded, "since Japan must fight a long term war with China, we must prepare for a country other than China."

The minister did not specify the power he had in mind. (Russia, through a Tass official news agency dispatch from Hankow, last month acknowledged sending war material to China, emphasizing that Japanese reports exaggerated extent of the shipments.)

Sugiyama emphasized the need for more planes. The Russian party paper Pravda, upon successful completion of two flights from Moscow to the American Pacific coast, six months ago warned Russia's "enemies" that their capitals were within easy range of soviet war planes. Foreign observers have viewed the editorial pointed toward Berlin and Tokyo both anti-communist and within 800 miles of soviet air bases.

Greek Premier Tightening Rule

Metaxas Regime Enters 'Period of Strict Severity'

Vienna —(P)—The tightening of the "strong man" rule of Premier General Ioannis Metaxas in Greece has reached the highest point of its principal enemies was reported today in private advices from Athens.

They said the virtual dictatorship established by the premier in 1936 had become more "severe" for some time, and that all former leaders of parliament—dissolved in 1936—had been seized and sent to remote Greek islands.

Announcement in the controlled Greek press that the Metaxas regime had entered a period of "strict severity" were interpreted here to mean General Metaxas had moved to make his power absolute.

There were unconfirmed reports of troop mobilizations in Greece as a precaution against disturbances.

Greece restored its monarchy in 1935, with King George II reigning, but since he became premier in 1936 General Metaxas has been its "strong man." Pleading fear of a communist uprising the government proclaimed martial law Aug. 4, 1936, suspended parts of the constitution and dissolved parliament.

In the cabinet as reconstituted Jan. 21, General Metaxas has been premier and minister for foreign affairs, war, navy and air.

Coroner Calls Death Of Kenney Accidental

Washington —(P)— Members of congress and other friends paid their respects today to the late Representative Edward A. Kenney of New Jersey, whose fall from a sixth-floor window of a hotel was held by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald to have been accidental.

They passed by his body in a funeral home near the capitol. Arrangements were made to take the body to New Jersey.

The funeral will be Monday in St. John's church in Cliffside Park, N. J. Burial will be at Clinton, Mass., Kenney's birthplace.

New York —(P)— One policeman was shot to death and another wounded today in a pistol fight which followed robbery of a Bronx pawnshop.

Sergeant David Kilpatrick was mortally wounded when he and alarm encounter two men hurrying out of the pawnshop. The men opened fire and the policeman responded. Both gunmen were captured.

Federation Is Near Action on CIO Question

Expected to Vote Expulsion of Suspended Lewis Unions

HOWARD RAPS GREEN

Calls Rejection of Proposal 'Ridiculous' And 'Illogical'

Miami, Fla. —(P)— The American Federation of Labor's executive council today neared the time to consider expelling the United Mine Workers and other CIO unions whose charters are suspended.

President William Green said "important action" was to come shortly. The council has been principally occupied with internal union difficulties since opening its mid-winter session Monday.

Joseph Ozanic, president of the Progressive Miners of America, placed before the council an accusation that the United Mine Workers, of which John L. Lewis is president, had fostered the prosecution of two recent Illinois cases which were adverse to the Progressive Miners and to labor generally.

Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical union, criticized Green's rejection of Lewis' peace proposal under which CIO unions would march back into the A. F. of L. and receive charters immediately, with details to be settled later.

Assails Refusal

Howard, who also is secretary of the CIO, termed Green's refusal "ridiculous" and "illogical."

Green, in reply, said, "Howard is secretary of the Committee for Industrial Organization and as an officer of the CIO it is expected that he would continually criticize and find fault with the American Federation of Labor."

"It is impossible to settle it," Howard declared, "without taking in all concerned on a basis of equality. While one side is out, it cannot get in except on terms fixed by the 'ins.' After everyone is in, let them decide jurisdictional disputes by two-thirds vote."

Howard said he would favor withdrawal of the I.T.U. from the A. F. of L. if the federation at the time took control of the union's financial affairs.

Two are Executed in Illinois for Murder

Chester, Ill. —(P)— Two lives were claimed for one today in a double execution which sent a woman to the electric chair for the first time in Illinois' history.

Dry-eyed and calmly, Mrs. Marie Porter, 37-year-old St. Louis mother, went to her death with the handsome triggerman she hired to kill her brother on his wedding day.

Angelo Ralph Giancola, 22, the slayer, predicted death to the Southern Illinois state prison chair. He, too, went soberly, gripping a crucifix in both hands.

Giancola and Mrs. Porter previously had been reprieved three times. Originally they were sentenced to die last Oct. 17 for the murder of William Kappen, also of St. Louis, near Belleville, Ill., last July 3.

At the trial in St. Clair county circuit court, Giancola testified he shot and killed Kappen at Mrs. Porter's insistence and in her presence so she could collect $3,300 life insurance. Kappen had planned to make his bride the beneficiary of his policies.

John Joseph Giancola, 20, brother of Angelo, also was convicted of complicity in the crime. He is serving 99 years.

Jap Official's Home Is Damaged by Bomb Blast

Shanghai —(P)— A bomb thrown from a passing automobile exploded at the entrance of the residence of the Japanese consul general here tonight, damaged the building slightly but hurt no one.

It was the eighth bomb explosion within 24 hours in the Shanghai area. The neighborhood, in the heart of the French concession, was jarred. The bomb thrower escaped.

Tonight's bombing was considered one of a series ascribed to Chinese terrorists seeking to kill Japanese and intimidate Chinese that none will have any dealings with the Japanese conquerors of the Shanghai area.

Borah at Luncheon With Roosevelt To Discuss Anti-Monopoly Measure

Washington —(P)— Proponents of an anti-monopoly bill requiring federal licensing of corporations staked their hopes of administration support today on a visit of Senator Borah (R-Idaho) to the White House.

Borah, long an ardent "trust buster," was invited to have luncheon with the president.

The Idaho senator helped draft the licensing measure with Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), who talked with the president earlier this week. O'Mahoney reported he and Mr. Roosevelt "made a little progress."

Mr. Roosevelt is expected to give congress his views on anti-trust legislation soon, and some observers said he might ask Borah's help in enacting his recommendations. The program, it was said, might include some of Borah's idea, along with

Increase Naval Construction Program By 20 Pct., Roosevelt Asks in Message to Congress

House Gets Bill Embodying Roosevelt Naval Requests

MESSAGE LAUDED

Most Congressional Comment Backs Roosevelt Views

Washington —(P)— A big increase in the nation's fighting power on sea and land was asked by President Roosevelt today because, he said, an international armament race threatened "world peace and security."

The immediate response to the president's message was introduction by Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the house naval committee of a bill carrying out the recommendations as regards the navy.

Although neither the executive nor the Vinson bill specified the number of ships to be built, Vinson said 47 ships would be authorized. No time was set for completing the program. Vinson explained that construction would progress as congress appropriated the necessary funds.

The other congressional naval chairman, Senator Walsh (D-Mass.) said he was in "full accord and sympathy with the president's message."

"Two-Ocean" Navy

"We have come to the realization recently we have a one-ocean navy," Walsh declared. "We should consider building a two-ocean navy."

General war conditions in the Orient, Walsh said, and the "military state of mind of European countries undoubtedly has drawn attention to the inadequacies of our navy and led to a new program."

A contrary view was expressed by Representative Fish (R-N.Y.), a member of the house foreign affairs committee.

"The president's message," he said, "amounts to a complete change in our traditional foreign policies and proposes a navy not for defense but for aggression and to police the world."

The house Republican leader, Representative Snell of New York, said, however, he was willing to do everything necessary for the full and ample protection of our people and country.

'Impressive' Message

Speaker Bankhead (D-Ala.) remarked that it was "an impressive message because of its simplicity."

Officers Go to Texas For Robbery Suspect

Port Washington —(P)— Sheriff Ben Runkle and two deputies left yesterday for Dallas, Texas, where authorities are holding the third man sought in connection with the recent hold-up-slashing near here of Alex Baumgarten, Ozaukee county tavern operator.

Runkle said the prisoner was Orin Bridges, 21, of Chicago, and that Bridges would be returned to Wisconsin to face a charge of being accessory before the fact of murder.

The other two suspects in the slaying are Fred C. May, 23, charged with first degree murder, and Lawrence Sargeant, 25, charged with being an accessory before the fact.

They were brought here from Hastings, Mich., where they were arrested last Saturday.

Referendum Is Sought On Military Training

Kenosha —(P)— The board of education voted last night to ask the city council to authorize a referendum on the question of military training in the local high school.

The board asked the council to place the question before the voters at the April election.

Military training at the high school was urged originally two months ago by the American Legion's Americanism committee. It has been opposed by church and labor groups.

When petitions were circulated among the high school students there were 275 signers in favor of military training, and 362 against. There are 1,100 boys in the school.

Text of Special Message On U.S. National Defense

Washington —(P)— The text of President Roosevelt's message on national defense follows:

The congress knows that for many years this government has sought in many capitals with the leaders of many governments to find a way to limit and reduce armaments and to establish at least the probability of world peace.

The congress is aware also that while these efforts, supported by the hopes of the American people, continue and will continue they have nevertheless failed up to the present time.

We, as a peaceful nation, cannot and will not abandon active search for an agreement among the nations to limit armaments and end aggression. But it is clear that until such agreement is reached—and I have not given up hope of it—we are compelled to think of our own national safety.

It is with the deepest regret that I report to you that armaments increase today at an unprecedented and alarming rate. It is an ominous fact that at least one-fourth of the world's population is involved in merciless devastating conflict in spite of the fact that most people in most countries, including those where conflict rages, wish to live at peace. Armies are fighting in the Far East and in Europe; thousands of civilians are being driven from their homes and bombed from the air. Tension throughout the world is high.

As commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States it is my constitutional duty to report to the congress that our national defense is, in the light of the increasing armaments of other nations, inadequate for purposes of national security and requires increase for that reason.

Proportionate Cost Lower

In spite of the well-known fact that the American standard of living makes our ships, our guns and our planes cost more for construction than those of other nations, the proportionate cost lower.

The president's recommendations are in addition to two battleships and two more battle cruisers already under construction, and two more battle ships and two more cruisers to be authorized in the 1939 naval appropriation bill, now pending in congress.

The president coupled to his request for better national defense a recommendation that congress provide for taking the profits out of armaments and for the equalization of burdens of possible war.

He said he recommended increased armaments "specifically and solely because of the piling up of additional land and sea armaments in other countries, in such manner as to involve a threat to world peace and security."

"The congress knows," he asserted, "that for many years this government has sought in many capitals with the leaders of many governments to find a way to limit and reduce armaments and to establish at least the possibility of world peace."

"The congress is aware also that while these efforts, supported by the hopes of the American people, continue and will continue they have nevertheless failed up to the present time."

Must Think of Safety

He said that while as "a peaceful nation," this country would not abandon "active search" for agreements to limit war and end aggression, "it is clear that until such agreement is reached—and I have not given up hope of it—we are compelled to think of our own national safety."

"It is with the deepest regret," Mr. Roosevelt said, "that I report to you that armaments increase today at an unprecedented and alarming rate. It is an ominous fact that at least one-fourth of the world's population is involved in merciless devastating conflict in spite of the fact that most people in most countries, including those where conflict rages, wish to live at peace."

"Armies are fighting in the Far East and in Europe; thousands of civilians are being driven from their homes and bombed from the air."

Mr. Roosevelt said it was necessary to realize that the "unfortunate world conditions of today have resulted too often in the discarding of these principles and treaties which underlie international law and order; and in the entrance of many new factors into the actual conduct of war."

Defines "Defense"

"Adequate defense means," he said, "that for the protection not only of our coasts but also of our communities far removed from the coast, we must keep any potential enemy many hundreds miles away from our continental limits."

"We cannot assume that our defense would be limited to the ocean and one coast and that the other

One Dead, Four Injured In Fire and Explosion

Fort Dodge, Iowa —(P)— One man was killed and four others injured in a fire and explosion at a Fort Dodge night club early today. The loss was estimated at $35,000.

M. W. Larson, a spectator at the fire, was killed when caught under falling bricks when an explosion blew out a brick wall. Fireman Earl Parks was caught under the falling wall but his helmet probably saved him from death. Seriously injured were William Hockaday, a waiter in the place, Harold Clausen, id Fred Morgan, spectators.

Cause of the fire and blast was unknown. Fire Chief H. J. Callahan said.

Planter Gets Prison Term, Fine for Peonage

Clarksdale, Miss. —(P)— A jury convicted Joseph Shelley Decker, 32, of peonage yesterday and the Tallahatchie county planter was sentenced to three years in federal prison and fined $1,000.

The government charged Decker held James W. Wiggins and his common-law wife, Ethel Lee Davis, Negroes, in servitude because Wiggins owed him $175. The woman, witnesses said, had been chained to her bed. Decker denied the charges.

Also Favors Added Fund for Betterment of Army 'SECURITY' IS GOAL

Washington —(P)— President Roosevelt asked congress today to authorize millions of new expenditures on the navy's fighting force and the army's land defenses to bolster armaments he termed "inadequate for purposes of national security."

Outstanding among the president's requests for armed "protection" based "not on aggression but on defense" was a 20 per cent increase in the navy building program.

Navy officials estimated the cost would be $800,000,000.

Mr. Roosevelt also recommended spending $173,300,000 for betterment of the eight battle cruisers for anti-aircraft armaments.

The program he outlined calls for building two additional battleships and two additional cruisers during the calendar year 1938. Mr. Roosevelt estimated, in discussing the message at his press conference, that the cost of entire new long-range program would be $29,200,000 during the fiscal year that begins next July 1.

The president's recommendations are in addition to two battleships and two more battle cruisers already under construction, and two more battle ships and two more cruisers to be authorized in the 1939 naval appropriation bill, now pending in congress.

The president coupled to his request for better national defense a recommendation that congress provide for taking the profits out of armaments and for the equalization of burdens of possible war.

Two Snow Removal Workmen Overcome By Monoxide Gas

Two men, Andrew Weyers, 26, route 2, Kaukauna, and Mathew Van Hoot, 54, route 1, Appleton, were overcome by carbon monoxide gas while removing snow with a truck on a Freedom town road about three miles east of Freedom at 3 o'clock this morning. They were recovering from effects of the gas today at St. Elizabeth hospital.

Both employees of the town were in the cab of the truck when Van Hoot said he felt ill. Weyers, who was driving the machine, stopped the truck and Van Hoot collapsed as he left the cab. Weyers managed to get Van Hoot to the Barney Schouten farm route 2, Kaukauna, nearby, before collapsing himself.

Famed 'Honeymoon Bridge' Plunges 200 Feet to Ice Covering Niagara River

Span Yields to 30-Hour Attack by Gigantic Ice Jam

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—(AP)—An international crowd of several thousand lined the lofty banks of Niagara gorge today for a glimpse of twisted steel and concrete on the icy carpet far below—all that remained of America's famous "Honeymoon bridge."

With a roar that drowned the cataraact's thunder, the towering structure succumbed to a 30-hour battering by the worst Niagara river ice jam in 50 years late yesterday.

It was the second span on the site to fall from attacks by nature. In 1889 a giant suspension span was blown down in a gale.

Thousands watched the shiny tons of steel plunge 200 feet onto the grinding river ice, so thick that it prevented the shattered bridge rem-

Opposes Cut in U. S. Road Funds

Wisconsin Legislator Claims Decrease 'False Economy'

Washington—(AP)—Representative Gehrmann, (R-Wis.) member of the house roads committee, today termed any decrease in federal allotments for roads, "unwise and false economy."

"Hundreds of thousands of our unemployed could be used on this type of work," said Gehrmann in a statement in the Congressional Record, "and congress must provide funds for this purpose anyway. Then why change the highway aid and break faith with the states and their subdivisions?"

Gehrmann declared a statewide highway program cannot be carried out in a year or two, adding that it has taken "many years" of cooperation between federal and state agencies to attain the present plan of co-ordinating funds.

"I do not believe there is anything else of a necessary and permanent nature that could be done that so large a part of the money expended goes for wages. It is reliably stated over 80 per cent is paid out to labor."

"I heard advocates of more battleships say it would create additional jobs, but I am certain that from the standpoint of aiding the unemployed it would not compare with highway construction."

Independence Bill Would Keep Islands From Being "Buffer State"—O'Malley

Washington—(AP)—Representative O'Malley (D-Wis.) said today his bill to provide immediate independence for the Philippines would save the islands from becoming a buffer state like Belgium during the last war.

Patriotic Filipinos and American congressmen said, did not want to see their homes and their families "become the shooting ground for great nations in a Pacific war."

And patriotic Filipinos and Americans he added, had "every right to fear a major conflict in the region because of world conditions today."

He said President Quezon was "deliberately misrepresenting the facts" in saying the O'Malley independence bill would not "do moral justice" to the Phil-

Scandal in Government Is Something New for Citizens of Wisconsin

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—For decades Wisconsin citizens have said and heard it said that in Wisconsin political affairs are conducted on a high plane. Scandals in the state or local government of Wisconsin have been few, in notable contrast to some other sections of the country.

But today the private citizen contemplates with amazement or anger, depending on his point of view, half a dozen governmental scandals, which together are keeping a horde of investigators busy and together furnish the most sensational news state capitol officialdom has made in at least a quarter of a century.

Here is the record of the last few months:

The devious development of the B. E. Buckman securities firm with- in the shadow of the state capitol during more than 12 years, and its smashing crackup a few months ago.

Charges by a high official in the state treasury department that he had been offered a heavy bribe and been subjected to political "heat" to refrain from prosecuting a giant state bootleg ring.

Revelations that Forest county officials have sold county lands to the federal government without a penny of investment, and at huge profits to themselves.

Charges that Florence county officials are backing and profiting from gambling, vice, and liquor law violations.

The vice investigation in Wauke- sha county.

Recent recommendations that Dane county officials be prosecuted for alleged irregularities in the dis- position of county tax funds.

The continued and heavy sale of whiskey warehouse receipts in spite of repeated protests by the public service commission, and a ruling by the attorney general that such sales are illegal without securities deal- ers licenses.

More to Come?

Combined these developments provide the basis for continuous scandalous gossip, sensational rum- mors of still more scandals to come. And generally it is agreed that all of them are leaded with "political dynamite."

Developments have all landed in Governor Phil LaFollette's lap. He has appointed special prosecutors in the Buckman and Forest county cases, has ordered a sweeping in- vestigation into conditions in Flo- rence county, and has already re- moved the Forest county district at- torney, Francis Horne, from office.

Most important in public interest, and in its political significance, is the investigation into the affairs of the Buckman company, which promptly closed its doors when the state began its scrutiny.

Besides the financial interest of hundreds of investors who bought securities from Buckman agents all over the state, Governor LaFol- lette's investigators recently brought into the case William Din- neen, former executive of the pub- lic service commission which ap- proved Buckman practices, and re- vealed that he had received large "gifts" of bonds from a Chicago utility official for help in negotiat- ing a Wisconsin utility deal.

Can't Prove Charges

The capital is still ringing with the echoes of the sensational charges by Sam Woldenburg, head of the beverage tax division, that a $1,000 bribe had been offered him recently to "lay off" a big alcohol

Wright to Take Stand on Monday

Defendant Near Collapse As Trial Is Delayed Again

Los Angeles—(AP)—Dapper, 38- year-old Paul A. Wright, near nervous collapse as his trial once again was delayed today, will tell the jury Monday his version of what drove him to kill his wife and John Kimmel, his close friend.

This announcement was made by Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler, who awaited resumption of Wright's trial for his life this afternoon.

Superior Judge Ingall W. Bull postponed the trial until then be- cause of other court duties.

The appearance of Wright, only living witness to the tragedy in his Glendale home early Nov. 8, is ex- pected to climax the trial.

Wright was on the verge of col- lapse after hearing testimony which laid bare the details of his court- ship and five-year marriage to Mrs. Evelyn Mc Bride Wright. He trem- bled visibly as he gazed wildly out of a nearby window.

Summoned as a character witness for Wright, Kenneth M. Stevens, Detroit attorney, told of introduc- ing Wright to the woman who later became his wife.

The jury, however, was not per- mitted to hear Stevens' story con- cerning Wright's sterilization op- eration for the safety of his wife and of financial worries which he said beset Wright.

Stevens' testimony highlighted that of nine witnesses called by the defense on its opening day. All testified Wright seemed devoted, kind and considerate to his wife.

Lynching Bill Is Only Move to Get Vote of Negroes

Measure Won't be Effective Even if Passed, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—"While Rome burns, Nero fiddles," might be translated today: "While the nation suffers a severe business recession, the Democratic party plays politics."

For several weeks now the work of the senate of the United States has been tied up by a prolonged case of maneuvering on the part of northern Republicans and northern Democrats to make the Negro voters of the country think that each party is their friend.

As a matter of fact, neither side cares anything really about the anti-lynching legislation, for, while lynching is to be deplored and there ought to be some way to prevent its recurrence, the bill now pending is unquestionably unconstitutional and would never achieve the ends sought even if it were held valid by the supreme court of the United States.

The measure proposes to give the federal government power to prosecute sheriffs and local officers for neglect of duty if lynchings occur. This is a use of federal power which, if carried to logical conclusion, would mean that the state police power could be supervised and held responsible to the federal power in everything else, including lynching.

Want Votes
But the merits of the proposed reform have little or nothing to do with the lineup in the senate. Any bill that ostensibly is in the interest of greater power for the Negro is bound to awaken controversy as between the north and southern Democrats. In the south, where Negroes are allowed to vote, but in the northern cities, especially during the last two decades, the Negroes have become such an important balance of power in a half dozen states that United States senators listen to the petitions of Negro groups more than ever before in our whole history.

It is significant that, in the vote to end debate by applying the cloture rule, the Democrats voted almost solidly in favor of forcing the debate to come to an end so that the measure itself could be voted upon. The Republicans played politics by lining themselves up against cloture because they wanted to embarrass the Democrats. For, after all, the Democrats have an overwhelming majority, and, if they cannot put through a bill friendly to the Negroes, then the Republicans will have a chance—at least, so they think today—to call attention to it in the next campaign and perhaps win back the enormous number of Negro votes which used to be Republican but which deserted the G. O. P. in 1936.

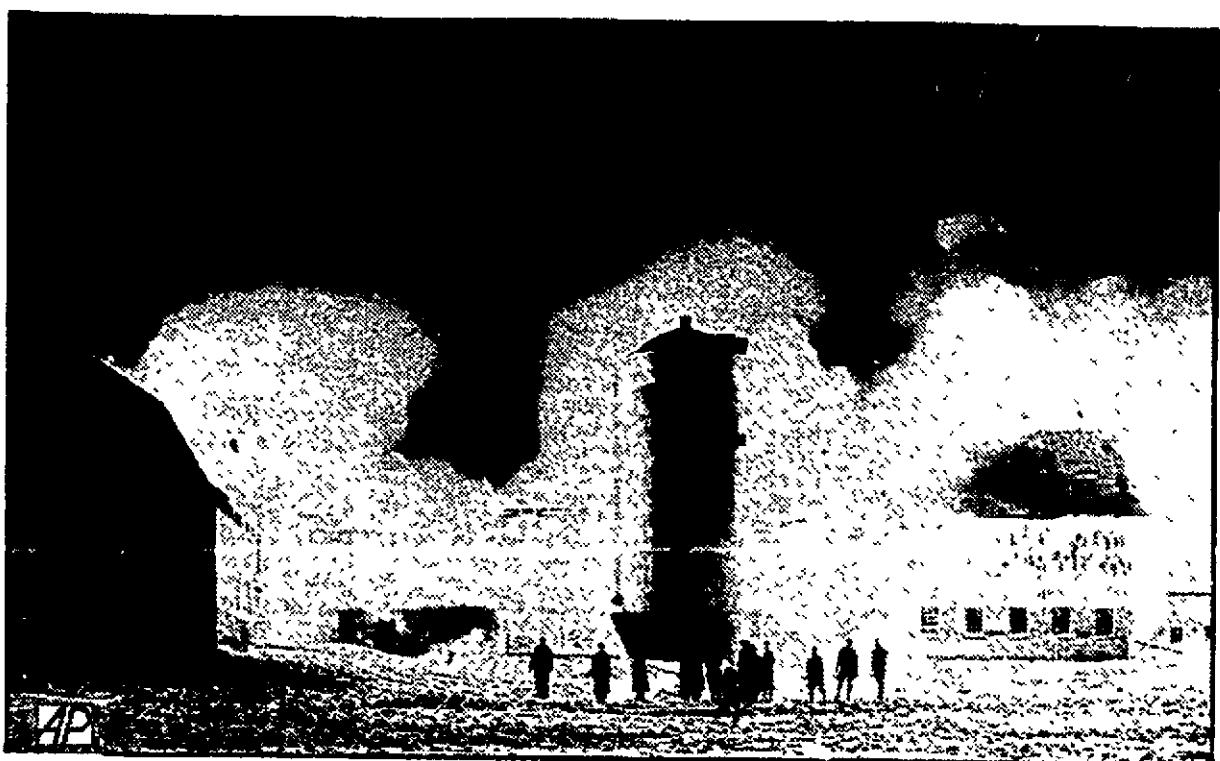

Record Vote
If the debate goes on, maybe there will be a record vote. When the time comes for the yeas and nays—if it ever does come—the Republicans doubtless will, with few exceptions, vote for the measure so as to show the Negroes they are their staunch friends. The northern Democrats will also vote for the bill. The southern Democrats will be found in a separate group against the measure. The possibility that the bill might pass if the Republicans and northern Democrats combine is such that the southern Democrats are trying to talk the measure to death by prolonged debate. This is government by minority, but it is often resorted to as a protection against insincerity on the part of the majority. In this instance, doubtless, most of those who will vote for the measure do not believe it is constitutional or practical either.

Some parliamentary device, no doubt, will be developed soon to get rid of the anti-lynching bill through a motion to lay it on the table or to send it back to committee for further study—either plan being calculated to enable a northern Democratic senator to say to Negro mass meetings next fall that he did his utmost to get the bill enacted, but that other senators prevented this from happening.

The business of the United States must go on and members are unwilling to lead of the long filibustering debate, but politics must be served. Ways and means must be devised, apparently, to take care of political plots and conspiracies that may loom large in the autumn campaign, especially in close districts.

Change Vote
The Negro has for many years been a Republican voter. During 1936, there were substantial defections, and, in some states, the Negroes voted the Democratic ticket by a ratio of nearly 2 to 1. The Negroes, however, followed the general trend, which, at the time, was based upon the belief that the Roosevelt administration had brought real prosperity. A huge proportion of the Negro voters went over to the Democratic ticket in November, 1936, to get reelected. The Republicans need it badly to get their accustomed strength of the past.

Hence all the maneuvering and political debating that has occupied the United States senate since early this month. As for the development of a public sentiment within the southern states to prevent further lynchings or to bring to the bar of justice those who clandestinely participate in them, it is doubtful whether much has been accomplished. More could be done by exposure through the press.

Red Cross Begins Drive For Chinese War Relief

The American Red Cross million dollar drive to aid distressed Chinese civilians opened today in Outagamie county.

Contributions to relieve sufferers in the war torn zones will be received at the Outagamie county chapter office here, according to Mrs. S. C. Shannon, executive secretary. Checks should be made out to "Outagamie County Chapter, American Red Cross."

The drive was started at President Roosevelt's suggestion. The president told the national chairman that he was convinced "there is a widespread desire on the part of our citizens in every section of the country to contribute. The need of the Chinese is evidenced by the fact that Japanese report adequate resources while the Chinese report they need outside assistance."

Funds collected will be expended through reliable and effective agencies which already exist in China under the supervision of the American advisory committee composed of outstanding Americans residing in China.

No quotas have been fixed for the drive but the Red Cross officials feel that the generosity of American citizens will respond to the need of the suffering men, women and children of China. Money collected in the county will be sent to national headquarters, Mrs. Shannon said.

Committees to Consider Bids on Police Radios

Bid on police radio equipment for Outagamie county municipalities will be considered by members of the police radio committee and the county highway committee Monday at the court house. Proposals were opened by the police radio committee last week.

Waupaca County Clerk Compiles Data On Naming Precinct Election Officials

Waupaca—According to recent ruling by the attorney general, the basis of appointing precinct election officials, is to be the party vote at the last preceding November election. The party casting the largest vote in the precinct for governor will be the dominant party of that precinct and entitled to two inspectors, while the next highest will have one. Each such party will also get one clerk of election and one ballot clerk. According to the method of determination cities and villages in Waupaca county will be dominated first by the Republicans, then the Progressives and then the Democrats.

An announcement relating to the nomination and appointment of election officials was made this week by County Clerk L. J. Steiger "in view of the earnest requests coming to this office from party committees and others as to the correct manner of preparing lists of nominees for precinct election officials for the next two years."

On the basis of the 1936 vote for governor, Republicans will name two inspectors in each of the following precincts, while the Progressives will name one inspector in each precinct:

Villages of Embarras, Fremont, Iola, Manawa, Marion, Ogdensburg, Scandinavia and Weyauwega; the First, Fourth and Fifth wards of the city of Clintonville; the Fourth and Fifth wards of the city of New London, and all four Waupaca wards.

Progressives are the ranking party in all other precincts in the county, with Democrats second in the village of Big Falls; and Republicans in the remaining precincts: Second and Third Clintonville wards; First and Second New London wards.

In the county, the Republican party having been first in 16 precincts and second in 5, would get 37 inspectors, 16 clerks of election and 15 ballot clerks for a total of 69 election officials.

The Progressive party with first place in 6 precincts and second place in 16 precincts, would get 28 inspectors, 6 ballot clerks and 6 clerks of election, a total of 40 election officials.

The Democrat party with second place in one precinct gets one inspector.

Tax Law Means What Tax Officials Say It Means

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—Here is another case in which the bureau of internal revenue lifts its cap to a hot one and lets it go by without even making a fuss at the ball.

The present income tax law exempts religious bodies, provided that no substantial part of their activities is carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation.

A week ago a dispatch from Albany reported that Bishop F. Gibbons of the Catholic diocese of Albany had written to all members of the New York legislature urging them to oppose ratification of the proposed child labor amendment to the federal constitution. This was a frank, open effort to influence legislation, but there is no reason to believe that an attempt will be made to declare the exemption void.

This law reads substantially as follows:—

"Corporations, and any community chest, fund or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational purposes, no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting to influence legislation."

The proviso against propaganda and attempts by other means to influence legislation was adopted in 1934. Its intent is plain, but its definitions are fuzzy. It plainly means just what it says, but the word "substantial" is the first escape down which the treasury flees from an embarrassing task.

In Washington some months ago I asked one of the most expert experts in the bureau of internal revenue if this little amendment would be enforced if a religious organization were shown to have attempted to influence legislation on divorce or child labor in New York. He had been speaking freely on other phases of the income tax, but at this point he clamped his jaws, shook his head and would not say "aye," "yes" or "no."

Treasury Official Ducks the Question

"Later I put the same question to a treasury official of much higher rank, and he threw up his hands in a manner which indicated that the question was loaded with dynamite."

Today, in New York, an expert in the internal revenue service consented to discuss the case of Bishop come within the meaning of the act and the intent of congress. But he said that if the case were to come before him he would, decide in favor of the diocese and uphold the exemption on the ground that the writing of these letters by the bishop in an open attempt to influence legislation did not constitute a substantial part of the activities of the diocese itself. Even though the intent of congress to abate such influence were defeated, he would stand on his own ground, his interpretation of the word "substantial."

Might Be Different If Corporation Were Involved

The child labor amendment is highly controversial, but I do not attempt to involve it in this discussion. Neither do I discuss the wisdom of the amendment to the income tax law, which was adopted deliberately and for a plain purpose.

My point is that if a private individual or a corporation were to rub so close against the law the bureau would not wait for any third person to raise the question whether the exemption had been forfeited or search for reasons to preserve the exemption regardless. The bureau would take the initiative, would fight like hell and drag the taxpayer through laborious, expensive and possibly humiliating appeals and, in the end, would certainly decide the case against him.

It is merely another example of the whimsical and political interpretation of the income tax law by a department operating under the motto:—"The income tax law means what the internal revenue says it means."

Appleton Postal Deposits Reach Total of $280,000

496 Deposits on Record June 30, Report to Congress Shows

(Special to the Post-Crescent)

Washington, D. C.—That 496 Appleton residents had $279,980 on deposit with the government's postal savings system as of last June 30, is revealed in the post office department's annual report on the system to congress.

This compared with 465 depositors and $252,806 in savings as of the same date a year earlier, giving the system a net gain at the window of the Appleton post office.

The report showed that for the state of Wisconsin as a whole the number of depositors increased from 57,786 to 59,358 and the total salted away in the 2 per cent interest certificates rose from $33,240,089 to $35,621,676.

Officials of the postal savings system, which is occasionally under fire from bankers on the ground that it diverts savings from private commercial institutions, said the interest rate on postal savings is about the same as on savings bank accounts.

No effort is made to promote sale of the postal certificates, which range in denomination to as low as two dollars, except for signs in post office lobbies. This contrasts with the treasury's intensive efforts by advertisements and circularization of all income tax payers to push the sale of that department's U. S. savings bonds.

The national total on deposit with the post office system, according to the report, is $1,267,000,000, $36,000,000 more than last year, and about the same as deposits in the treasury's savings bonds.

YOUR Income Tax

In addition to the personal exemption of $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families, a taxpayer is entitled to a credit of $400 for each dependent, defined by income tax law and regulations as a person under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective. The term "mentally or physically defective" means not only cripples and those mentally defective but persons in ill health and the aged.

In order to be entitled to the $400 credit, the taxpayer must furnish the dependent, his or her chief support. The credit is based upon actual financial dependency, and not mere legal dependency. For example, a father whose children receive half or more of their support from a trust fund or other separate source is not entitled to the credit.

Neither relationship nor residence is a factor in the allowance of the $400 credit for a dependent. The taxpayer and the dependent may be residents of different cities. If husband and wife both contribute to the support of a dependent, the $400 credit may be taken by the one contributing the chief support, and may not be divided between them.

A single person who supports in his home an aged mother is entitled not only to the $400 credit for a dependent but also to the personal exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family. A widower supporting under similar circumstances a dependent child under 18 years of age also is entitled to the personal exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family, plus the $400 credit for a dependent.

Under the Revenue Act of 1935 both the personal exemption and the credit for dependents are required to be prorated where the status of the taxpayer changed during the year.

Wilson Orchestra Entertains During Assembly Program

Students of Wilson Junior High school were entertained by the school orchestra, directed by Jay I. Williams, during a general assembly program this morning.

The program opened with a march, "Dash and Vigor," by William Shade, played by the orchestra and was followed by an instrumental trio number entitled, "In Our Canoe." Members of the trio were Kenneth Retza, George Krueger and Robert Boldt.

"Up and Down," by Walker, was played by the orchestra and a girls' violin trio then played "Long, Long Ago." The girls were Eleanor Retza, Marilyn Drier and Betty Pinger. Clova Dell Ginnow presented a violin solo entitled, "Fifth Air Varié," by Dancila, and was accompanied by Ila Steuck at the piano. A violin duet was given by Franklin Ritzke and "Viennese Memories," played by the orchestra, concluded the program.

Liverpool's name is believed to be derived from the Norse words meaning the "pool of the slopes." France is planning to install the world's most powerful television station in the Eiffel tower.

Coming—another year of NEWS supremacy

A MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

APPLETON POST-CRESCENT

This newspaper enters another year unswerving in its determination to provide the news of the whole world—accurately, swiftly, completely

The record for last year already has been written. Through the vast facilities of THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, this newspaper reported daily the rapid story of current events, illustrated with fast, vivid pictures. The supremacy of this close partnership of news and pictures was boldly reflected in coverage of such big front page stories as The Devastating Ohio River Floods, The Texas School Explosion, The Hindenburg Disaster, The War in China.

As a member of THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, world's largest non-profit, co-operative, news gathering organization which serves 1400 member papers, this newspaper was proud to share in the achievements of 1937. The same vigilance which made such achievements possible is the watchword for 1938.

Today and Tomorrow

BY WALTER LIPPMAN

In Mr. Hoover's Footsteps

On Tuesday the President at the White House and Mr. John L. Lewis before the United Mine Workers convention made almost identical statements on the subject of wages and prices. There was perhaps a slight difference of emphasis as regards the possibility of reducing prices without reducing wages, but in talking to the newspaper men the President made it plain that his main concern, like Mr. Lewis's, is to hold wage rates at their present level, excepting only in the building trades in some localities.

An interesting aspect of these declarations is that both men seem to think that they are meeting this depression with a radically different and a radically better policy than that of Mr. Hoover in the autumn of 1929. Mr. Lewis said as much to the miners and brought forth against poor Mr. Hoover the usual boos. Mr. Roosevelt in his statement to the press announced his purchasing power theory of wages with the air of a man who thought this theory was peculiar to his administration. Yet the fact is that in the first year of the depression, in 1929-30, President Hoover held exactly the same views as Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Lewis hold now, and used almost exactly the same methods to enforce them on industry.

In fact, if any one will go to the trouble to run through the files of the newspapers for the months immediately following the crash of 1929 he will find, I feel sure, that in almost every essential move Mr. Roosevelt has been imitating Mr. Hoover. The one thing Mr. Hoover did not do was to say unpleasant things—publicly—about business men and bankers. But otherwise the depression policies of the two Presidents have been the same.

Both Believed Drop in Market Unimportant

Neither was willing to believe that the crash in the security markets was a serious symptom; both preferred to believe that fundamental conditions were "sound" and that prosperity was just around the corner. Mr. Roosevelt's phrase is that "business is temporarily slack." Neither was willing to consider seriously any decisive change in administration policy. Both felt equally annoyed at the stock market, and particularly at the bears. Both rushed in to subsidize the farmer to curtail production. Both urged business men to "plan." Both proceeded to deal with what they regarded as a temporary disturbance by summoning showy delegations of business men and labor leaders, giving them some kind of pep talk, and exacting promises that they would not reduce wages and that business corporations would spend more money.

The notion that Mr. Hoover was the heartless agent of heartless employers who insisted on breaking down wage rates and that Mr. Roosevelt, on the contrary, is the champion of existing wage rates is entirely untrue. Mr. Hoover used all his influence to prevent any reduction of wages. Moreover, he succeeded in preventing any important reduction of wage rates for one full year of the depression, and then, when wage rates did begin to crumble, Mr. Hoover continued to object.

The data are quite clear. Hourly earnings in manufacturing industries were as high in the late summer of 1930 as they were a year earlier; they were higher than they were in 1928 or in any prosperous year before that.

What happened in Mr. Hoover's

CPA Unit Reminds Employers of Tax

Deadline for Filing Forms, Paying Excise Levy Is Jan. 31

The Northern Wisconsin chapter of the Wisconsin Society of Certified Public Accountants has directed the attention of taxpayers to the annual return of the federal excise tax on employers of eight or more persons during the calendar year 1937 on "Form 940."

A deadline of Jan. 31 has been set for filing of the form with the collector of internal revenue in the taxpayers' district and the payment of the tax. The employers may elect to pay the tax in four equal quarterly installments starting Jan. 31.

The tax is on all wages and salaries in any form, excepting fees paid to directors of corporations as such. Officers of corporations actively engaged in the business are regular "employees" for the purpose of this tax, it has been explained. The rate of tax is two per cent, subject in Wisconsin to a 90 per cent credit if the employer is complying with the Wisconsin unemployment tax law.

Automotive Association Holds Monthly Meeting

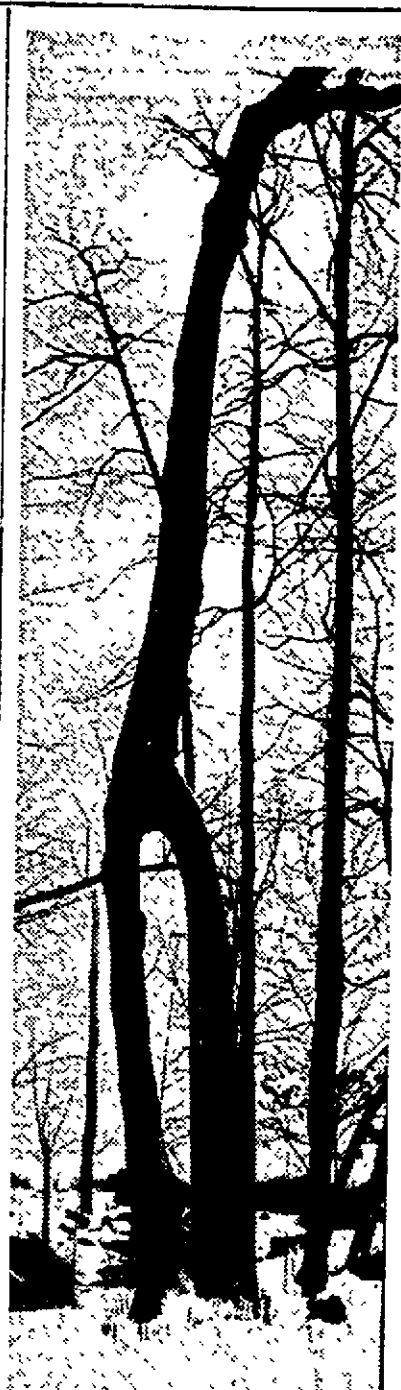

Members of the Fox River Automotive association met last night in Hotel Northern following a 6 o'clock dinner. About 30 men were present at the monthly session.

Means of creating purchasing power.

It is obvious what those "other means" are. They are increased government spending financed by inflationary methods. This is in substance what Mr. Lewis's miners were demanding while the president was talking at the White House. The miners are perfectly right, and have the courage of their convictions; if for political, moral or psychological reasons the costs of production cannot be adjusted to the price level, then the price level has to be adjusted to the costs of production.

Thus the policy announced at the White House on Tuesday may be regarded as a commitment which marks the prelude to renewed spending. Nothing can stop that, it would seem, except one of those sudden turns for the better that Mr. Hoover was always expecting in the next sixty days.

SAVED FROM AX

Theory says an Indian caused the bifurcation in the trunk of the 60-foot basswood tree, shown above, which has stood for many years in north Brillion town near Forest Junction. The trunk splits two feet above the ground and reunites about 20 feet upward.

The House of Tudor, which ruled England throughout the 16th century, was founded by Owen Tudor, a Welshman, who married Catherine of France, the widow of Henry V of England.

Believe Old Indian Wedges Split Trunk Of 60-Foot Basswood

Subject of much speculation is the bifurcated trunk of a 60-foot basswood which was saved from the ax when logging operations this winter cleared more than 40 acres of one of the last choice stands of timber in the locality of Forest Junction on the Frank J. Tamm and Gustave Schultz farms in north Brillion town.

Growing from a single trunk which diverges two feet above the ground, the two trunks of the tree reunite about 20 feet upward.

According to a theory held by the last previous generation of Tamms, an Indian had split the trunk of the tree in an early stage of its growth, holding the two sections apart with wooden wedges that dropped out as the tree matured. Slightly flattened inner surfaces of the double trunk add strength to this theory.

WHAT ARE THE RULES OF THE HOUSE?

With the Attorney General claiming the right to coerce and blackmail in the name of purity we have another uncertainty in an already uncertain atmosphere.

Messrs. Cummins and Jackson might as well look to the erasure and abandonment of all law. Cannot we also abolish the courts? Why not let the Attorney General run the legal end of the country, make the investigations, prefer the charges and fix the judgment?

That suggestion is not extreme judged alone by the demands in the Geiger case. Give us a free hand to do just as we please, practically says the Attorney General, or there will be a hot time in the old town.

For the time being we are not concerned in this controversy over just what the rule should be but we think it advisable to have rules, even if there be but one rule and that this: The Attorney General and his assistants shall be supreme in the enforcement of all laws. In fairness to the ordinary people of the country as well as the extraordinary such a rule should be promulgated if we are to indulge in that practice so that all of us may pay for our fair share to buy old telephone books from the Democratic National Committee and keep our stand-in with the party bright.

The necessity for understanding the rules was never shown any clearer than in this case unless it be in an old story of western gambling days. Then the supreme rule was that each house made its own law and for that purpose could change the ordinary rules of any game so long as it posted the changes in the gambling halls. It is related that an Easterner happened in one day and sat in a game of poker. When he found four queens in his hand he naturally let himself loose. On the showdown he found his opponent with but two deuces. As the opponent raked in the pot he advised the fellow with the four queens to read the house rules. The stranger walked to the wall and read: "The gillgaloobird consists of two deuces and beats any hand in the deck."

The stranger, being a good sport, accepted his loss and returned to play. It wasn't long before he had two deuces himself and bet the rest of his pile upon them. When he exposed them and reached for the chips his opponent advised him to read the next rule: "Only one gillgaloo-bird good in an evening."

Applying the gillgaloo-bird to the instant case even a temperamental Attorney General with the distemper ought to know that congress makes our laws and that judges who do not enforce them are not up on the rules of the game.

Will the Attorney General ask congress to set up some new rules of the House or shall we some day try to get an Attorney General that knows the present ones?

SCIENCE AND THE FARMERS

The close relation that science has knitted between industry and the farmer may be illustrated by a score of examples but by none more clearly, perhaps, than with the case of a simple kernel of corn.

In the state of Illinois alone over 4,000 workers are employed in the process of refining the corn raised in that state for a variety of purposes including salad and cooking oils, soaps and glycerine, corn-starch, caramel, rayon, confectionary sugars, ice cream, explosives, paper, fire-works, brewing, preserves, textiles, baking, tanning, etc. A few of these uses are nearly as old as corn. Some of them are as new as rayon. The great majority are modern. And the modern uses are attributable to an understanding of chemistry and to the ceaseless experiments in which the principal industries of the country expend tens of millions every year with the purpose of improving their products. The best example of the worth of science and industry to the farmer may be found in Henry Ford's announcement of the extent to which by-products of the farm, the wastes of yesterday, are utilized in the manufacture of automobiles. Good business always scores a mighty hit when it finds a valuable use for husks, straw, sawdust and the like.

Thus about 40 per cent of the corn that moves from the farm to market goes into these refining plants and out again in a hundred useful forms stabilizing demand for farm products and furnishing a flow of acceptable cash for the farmer.

COMMERCIALIZED GAMBLING IS THE SAME THE WORLD OVER

What commercialized gambling can do to a community, what it may be expected naturally to do, what indeed may be called its normal regular byproduct, is being unfolded before none other than Judge Van DeVenter, the 77-year-old retired justice of the United States supreme court who is conducting a federal court in New York City, trying two alleged super-swindlers, millionaire gambling kings of the divorce citadel known as Reno.

Nevada, it may be remembered, has legalized gambling and has sought to minimize its pernicious effects by a licensing system. But in the swath of commercialized gambling every sort of tinnhorn sport and tinnhorn criminal moves for it is the overshadowing justification for the slick game who clothe themselves in silks but never even work as much as a silkworm.

Graham and McKay are the names of the defendants in this particular trial and the government describes them as two great but polished spiders who sat in an extensive web centering at Reno and used the government there, the banks there, the police there, to finish off victims snared in cities all over the country and brought to Reno for the final coup, an act that must take place only where some great influence has paralyzed the law and converted even the banks and the government into confederates and accessories.

It was a rather ancient game in that the victims had been fed on winnings and made to believe they had already won high prizes either on stocks or horse races but required to post good faith money in order to insure their split. It is a suckers' game and as told in print it is hard to believe that men would fall for it but when staged by good actors assisted by good whisky and charming women it goes over with a bang and a wallop.

There was never any chance of conviction in Nevada. The millionaire gamblers had too much influence. There was never even a chance to obtain a warrant from a district attorney. And no doubt the sheriffs there would have resigned before they would execute such a warrant.

So the dear old federal government, the friend of all in distress, with its law against fraudulent use of the mails, was induced to step in.

And the moral is plainer than any neon sign erected on housetops. It is as applicable to Appleton as New York or Reno.

It is—Wipe out commercialized gambling just as soon as it rears its head. Never temporize with it. Don't compromise with it. It is poisonous to the roots.

Its stock argument that it brings business to a town or that anyone really wants it is as untrue as its claim that the sucker has a chance.

This is evident from the fact that it never succeeds excepting as it hires peilers, cappers and other loafers to solicit business without divulging that they are being paid by the house.

When it isn't destroyed it works ruin in ways more numerous than the games it presents.

OUR TREATY WITH RUSSIA IS TESTED

Russia is surly about compliance with that provision of the Roosevelt-Litvinov treaty of but four years ago guaranteeing the right to our country's official representatives to visit American citizens in Russian prisons without delay.

Russia intimates that it will concede the right "after full investigation." The treaty makes no such condition. Nor is it possible to find out how long the investigation will take.

There is an old rule that tough cases result in unreliable deductions. Yet Mrs. Robinson, though criminal to the extent of using a forged passport may possibly have been but the dupe of a wily international ring that considered it expedient to marry one of its operatives to her in the effort to further conceal its movements.

What does Russia mean by its "investigation"? Is it giving the lady some clumsy treatment with touches of horror in order to loosen her lips? Speculation is useless. But there is no speculation in the constantly rude and insolent violation of its treaties by Moscow.

As America thus gets a taste now and then of the ruthless means employed by a cruel and unprincipled government it may gather a better understanding of why its neighbors without exception distrust and hate it.

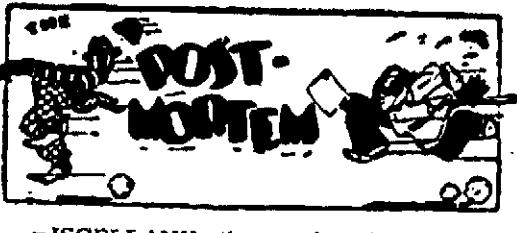

Opinions Of Others

"WELL DONE"

Hawaiians still chant of the exploits of the great Kamehameha, the Polynesian Garibaldi who only 143 years ago set out with his fleet of war canoes from the Island of Hawaii, landed on Oahu, fought the Oahu army and drove it over the pali near Honolulu.

What must have been their feelings the other day when the U. S. navy's eighteen patrol planes landed in Pearl Harbor after a record flight from San Diego? These planes, flying in formation through bad weather, had made the journey of 2,570 miles in 20 hours and 12 minutes. Compare that with the time it took Kamehameha's fast outrigger canoes to travel about 400 miles on their heroic mission in 1785. The airplane has brought the Hawaiian Islands closer to California than the little islands were to each other in Kamehameha's time. In the last four years forty-eight patrol planes have participated in formation flights from the mainland, but this was the greatest mass flight and the fastest.

Secretary Swanson's laconic comment, "Well done," was mild praise. But this flight was only routine to those who ride the twentieth century "air canoes" of the Pacific.—New York World-Telegram.

A Verse for Today
By Anne Campbell

SKATING ON THE CREEK

There's skating on the creek today!
The village children swarm,
With skates upon their arms, to play
With fellows from the farm.
The winter air is cold and clear,
The ice is smooth and thick.
So good friends flock from far and near
For skating on the creek!

There's skating on the creek tonight!
Across the gleaming miles,
The farmhouse window holds a light . . .
Upon the haystack piles
The sparkling snow. The moonlight slants
Across the fields and streams,
And children in familiar haunts,
Revive my own glad dreams.

There's skating on the creek today!
I wish that I could go
To ride once more in Granddad's sleigh
Across the sparkling snow!
I know old friendships are the same
In that dear bailiwick,
Where children join in our old game
Of skating on the creek!

EVERY BREATH HAS AN ODOR

Every body has its characteristic body odor, and everybody's breath has an odor, too, only the conditions of civilized life so dull the sense of smell that it perceives only the more emphatic odors.

Faulty elimination, a favorite of the charlatans, has no particular relation to bad breath. Reversed peristalsis sometimes cause furred tongue and foul breath, but peristalsis is independent of the function of excretion. Habitual overeating, abuse of condiments and the interference habit—that is, frequent use of laxatives—are the common causes of reverse peristalsis and the "brown" taste, furred tongue and heavy breath. Emotions may cause it, too. Popularly bad breath is regarded as an indication of a bad stomach, but in fact practically the only stomach trouble that may give rise to halitosis is gastritis, dilation of the stomach.

Tartar deposits on the teeth, septic or inflamed gums (gingivitis) and caries or cavities in the teeth are common causes of foul breath. Pyorrhea is usually accompanied with bad breath.

The eating of raw onions or garlic is well known. Not so well known is the onion or garlic odor on the breath of a person who has chronic arsenic poisoning.

Accumulation of cheesy masses in the crypts or openings in the tonsils sometimes causes halitosis.

Unhygienic or cheap dentures in the mouth frequently account for foul breath. Removable dentures may be kept clean and free from deposit by regular cleaning with bon ami.

Ozena, "dry catarrh," atrophic rhinitis, is the cause of the most offensive fetor. This is not the place to discuss the cause and treatment of ozena. Suffice that a spray of simple sugar solution is often of benefit—heaping teaspoonful of ordinary cane sugar dissolved in two ounces of boiled water; this may be sprayed, agreeably warm, in the nostrils three times a day.

Bad breath is due to various medicines the patient may be taking regularly or occasionally, in some cases.

No particular mouthwash or similar remedy will invariably cure halitosis. Perhaps the most effective temporary corrective for foul breath is a thorough rinsing of the mouth and gargling with a chlorine solution, such as sodium hypochlorite solution—a teaspoonful of the official solution of Sodium Hypochlorite to one ounce of water is strong enough to use as mouthwash. This or a weaker solution if this seems too strong, is as effective against onion or garlic breath as it is against other kinds of foul breath. When the odor is from particles of food or deposits in the mouth, as some investigators insist it is, even the odor after eating onion or garlic, mouthwashes are most effective; but they can be of little avail if the odor is due to volatile substances in the air, such as paraffin, alcohol, chloroform, ether, acetone, creosote, guaiacol, all of which are excreted in part thru the lungs. Neither can mouth washes prevent breath odor from dilated stomach, bronchiectasis, lung gangrene, empyema.

Coating on tongue or to deposits on teeth or ventres, a mouth wash of equal parts of glycerin, lemon juice and camphor water is satisfactory.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Powder For Foot Itch

It required only a few days, and I don't mean several, to get complete relief from foot itch by the use of the powder you suggested, in stocking and in shoes—one ounce of the sulphate of soda (photographer's "hyposulphite") with three ounces of boric acid powder? (H. W.)

Answer—It is useful as a prophylactic against foot itch.

Habit

If constipation is only a bad habit, as you claim, how do you explain the many, many remedies prescribed by various schools of the profession? (A. S.)

Answer—Aw, shucks, I'm not good at apology. But send ten cent coin and a three-cent stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for booklet "The Constipation Habit." Never can tell, it may show you how to get freed from the habit. (Copyright, 1938)

Your Birthday

"AQUARIUS"

If January 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. m.; from 2 to 4 p. m., and from 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m.; from 4 to 6 p. m., and from 9 to 11 p. m.

High-strung nerves may be responsible for the strange actions of many people this day. Insincerity is apt to be one of the principal shortcomings of someone whose loyalty you count on, so be discreet in telling anything you do not wish to be repeated. Keep your eyes open, and they may observe something that will save you from a lot of trouble. It perhaps will be advisable to be liberal in discussing any deal involving money, for a grasping spirit is likely to upset many a financial apple cart. Where there is a radical difference of opinion in any business transaction, an unbiased third person ought to be called in to act as an impartial judge and his or her decision accepted as fair. The gates of happiness will be closed to married and engaged couples, as well as sweethearts, if they indulge in any kind of bickering this day.

If a woman and January 29 is your birthday, you are probably very quick and graceful in all your movements. Dancing and athletic sports should be conducive to making you happy. Your prospects for a very bright future are excellent. Be on your guard against jealousy playing havoc with your happiness. You should be artistic and clever as a writer. Through teaching, writing, singing, acting or painting your name may become one that will be generally respected. As you are not likely to marry in haste, there should be no reason for your having to repent at leisure.

The child born on January 29 is likely to make its home circle happy and proud. This youngster's tender and mature years in all likelihood will be very interesting due to the spirit of progress causing it to do unusual things.

If a man and January 29 is your natal day, do not play the Sphinx and expect people to like you in that role. As a politician, lawyer, contractor, actor, sales agent, promoter, banker, artist or journalist some chance might give you the opportunity of winning fame overnight.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — Performance of the Securities Exchange commission under the public utility holding company act sheds a soft light on the President's statement to the effect that he intended to eliminate all holding companies.

The President, himself, indicated later he would like his position clarified. And inquiry at the Securities Exchange commission, which the President appointed, discloses to tolerant policy toward holding companies.

So far only two companies have submitted plans for reorganization in compliance with the act.

One was a comparatively small outfit in New England and the other the American Water Works and Electric company, which operates in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio and owns a fruit farm in California and an office building in New York. Its other interests, in addition to power distribution, include bus companies, a toll bridge, water systems, appliance stores, coal mines and gas distribution.

One Tier Removed

Compared with such systems as Electric Bond and Share and the Associated Gas and Electric, the American Water Works is a peewee. Like many another system, it "just grew." Topsy-like, from an interurban electric car system. It wasn't long before distribution of power became more profitable and the passenger business less so. New power plants had to be built and they invited consolidations of local distributing systems. Mergers like that often result in creation of holding companies which can pool the shares of the independent companies and distribute new shares on the basis of value contributed.

The American Water Works never became excessively complex, in a corporate sense, and its plan of reorganization called for sweating out only one layer of holding companies. By contrast, the Associated Gas and Electric has a dozen layers.

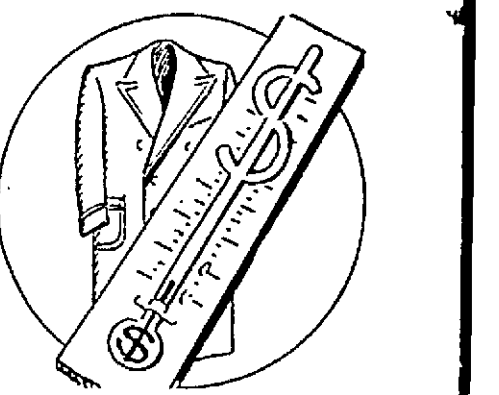

The original aim of the holding company bill was to sweat out all such companies except one which could be used to coordinate the performance of a "geographically integrated" system. But congress in 1935, at the time of the passage of the act, displayed solid opposition to any such drastic shakeup. It was that congressional attitude—perhaps strengthened now—which tempered the excitement over the President's statement. When enacted, the bill permitted one tier of holding companies to exist within a geographically integrated system, and others in addition if the SEC found they were beneficial.

A Light Touch

So we get back to the American Water Works plan to find that the commission actually permitted existence of two layers of holding companies. It is true the second layer was a combination holding company and operating company but nevertheless this combination acted as a holding company for other operating companies.

One of the reputed evils which holding companies are supposed to permit is for one company to own competing utilities, such as gas and electric companies, under circumstances which destroy real competition.

Yet the commission's touch in the American Water Works case was sufficiently tender that the company was permitted to continue operating both gas and electric systems in the same territory and was asked only to get rid of its New York office building and its California fruit farm and give its preferred stockholders a bigger say in operation of the outfit.

Add 1,500 Cases To Pension Rolls Since Last July

Sharp Increase in Applications Results From Liberalized Old Age Law

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — Almost 1,500 new cases have been added to the rolls while the number of applicants has increased 75 per cent since last July when the liberalized provisions of the state's old pension law became effective, George M. Keith, supervisor of the state pension department, said here today.

Keith pointed out that last July the number of old age assistance beneficiaries in Wisconsin was 36,358, while at the end of November the number had been boosted to 37,818. Today the total is probably over 38,000. Last July new applications filed numbered 887. During December 1,291 new applications were received.

Officials point out that much of the increase in total beneficiaries and total applicants are due to changes in the law which make it easier for the aged to become eligible for pensions. The amendments liberalized the property transfer provisions of the old age assistance law by exempting real estate in the state, $1,000 cash value in insurance, agricultural equipment, and also provided that county liens against homesteads shall not be exercised so long as the home is occupied by the surviving spouse or minor children of the recipient.

Will Continue
The pension department said that "from the volume of applications received in December, it is indicated that the accelerated rate of increase in the number of recipients will continue for several months and that the liberalization of the law will eventually result in the addition of 2,000 to 3,000 needy aged persons who previously were loath to accept old age assistance as they wished to protect equities in small lots of property."

For the whole year of 1937, old age assistance recipients increased in number 11.2 per cent, or 3,824, over 1936.

For the state as a whole, the percentage of the estimated total of population over 65 years of age receiving aid was 17.5. This compares with only 12.7 per cent in Brown county, and 13.9 per cent in Outagamie county.

Keith's report shows that in 1936 Brown county furnished aid to 487 aged, or 11.6 of the total population over 65. In 1937 the total number aided was 546. In 1936 Outagamie county helped 570 persons with old age assistance, which represented 12.7 per cent of the total over 65 population, while in 1937 the total aided was 621.

The proportion of those aided to the total number of residents over 65 years of age in other counties in the Appleton-Green Bay area is reported as follows for 1937: Manitowish 10.5; Marinette 20.1; Oconto 20.3; Shawano 19.2; Waupaca 17.9; Winnebago 14.8; Door 14.8; Calumet 9.6; Kewaunee 6.3.

119,363 Added to WPA in 2 Weeks

Total Enrollment at Present Is Set at 1,831,961

Washington—(AP)—The WPA said Thursday 119,363 persons were added to its rolls during the last two weeks.

This, officials said, brought the total enrollment to 1,831,961 to date. The last week showed an increase of 64,324 over enrollment the week before.

The rolls show a net increase of 160,799 persons enrolled since the first of the year. The peak of enrollment was 2,898,849 reached on Feb. 29, 1936, and the all time low was 1,450,101 on Oct. 2, 1937.

Later at a press conference, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said no need for additional relief appropriations for the current fiscal year had developed yet.

Saying frequent contacts with the works progress administration enabled him to judge the situation, Morgenthau asserted that there "isn't anything in the picture but what can be taken care of in the budget."

In his budget message to congress three weeks ago, President Roosevelt said the adequacy of the $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation for the year ending June 30 would depend on the trend of business.

WPA employment for the week ended Jan. 22, and the increase from the previous week, by states included: Michigan 56,645, and 3,317; Wisconsin 43,744 and 281.

G. O. P. Hopes to Gain House Seats

Martin Says Prospect Looks Good for November Election

Washington—(AP)—Representative Martin (R-Mass.), looking over a pile of reports from Republican state leaders, said Thursday the chances appeared good for the Republicans to wrest a substantial number of house seats from Democrats in the November election.

Martin is chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee and assistant minority leader of the house. "We're quite confident of gaining 60 seats," he said, "and if there isn't a vast improvement in the business situation, we might get a great many more."

"Of course, that's the way it looks at the present time. I wouldn't care to make any flat prediction, because it might look bad in November."

The Republicans now have 90 house members against 329 for the Democrats. Joining Martin in optimistic comment on party prospects was Representative Snell of New York, house Republican leader.

"The breaks are coming our way," he said. "I have no doubt we'll pick up a fair number of house seats next fall."

"The people are questioning the wisdom of all this administration experimenting. Not a single thing has worked out the way the president said it would. That's beginning to percolate down to the average fellow."

Evans Counsel Asks for Reversal of Judgment

Waukesha—(AP)—Counsel for Municipal Judge David M. Evans Thursday filed in state supreme court a request for a review and reversal of two portions of the judgment dismissing charges of election law violations against Judge Evans.

The request seeks to reverse that part of the judgment which held that Judge Evans spent more than $948.03, the legal limit. A circuit court jury found that although the legal limit had been exceeded, it had not affected the outcome of Judge Evans' campaign.

The request also seeks a reversal of the judgment to establish that Harold Orvis, upon whose reelection the action was brought, had acted in bad faith because he was "mad" at Judge Evans for releasing him as municipal court clerk. The right to recover costs and disbursements of the action also was asked.

Mercury Slumps to 12 Below in City; Snow Is Predicted

Coldest Mark of Winter Recorded at 2:30 This Morning

The coldest mark of the winter was recorded in the city today, but most citizens weren't abroad to experience it. The mercury slid down to 12 below zero at 2:30 this morning, according to charts at the Wisconsin Michigan Power company plant.

Snow and rising temperatures tonight, more snow but colder tomorrow is the forecast for Appleton and vicinity issued by the weather bureau at Milwaukee today.

Although plows have nosed their way through all streets in the city, opened lanes on county, state and federal highways in the county, and now are operating on town roads, traffic was still hampered today. Many roads were only of 1-way width and the danger of stalling remained.

Workmen made considerable headway today in their clearance of College avenue, with a fleet of trucks busy hauling the snow to a dumping place near the city fairgrounds.

10 Above At Noon

At noon today the thermometer atop the Post-Crescent building registered 10 above. During the 24-hour period preceding 9 o'clock this morning, the highest mark in the city was 12 above.

Upper Michigan, almost buried in this week's record storm, was slated for more snow tonight and tomorrow, according to weather reports. South and southwest winds prevailed today on Lake Michigan, and in Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

Snow in the south and east portions of Minnesota, accompanied by colder weather over most of that state, is predicted.

Phoenix, Ariz., reported 74 degrees yesterday, warmest in the nation. Wausau and Park Falls each had 14 below zero.

40,000 Engage in Bitter Struggle

Fight Hand-to-Hand Over 5-Mile Stretch of Spanish Front

Hondaye, France — (AP) — Forty thousand Spanish government and insurgent troops fought hand-to-hand today on a five mile section of the eastern front.

Repeated government charges threatened to sever an important insurgent supply artery between the villages of Singra and Torre la Carcel, about 30 miles north of Teruel.

Fighting was general all along the lines of the highway to Calamocha, which insurgent Generalissimo Muncisco had used to feed men and munitions to his forces attempting to win back Teruel, captured by government troops five weeks ago.

Waves of government troops swept down from the Palomera mountains to assail insurgents defending the five miles of highway between the two Aragon villages.

Thirty tanks, 600 field guns and 120 airplanes aided the ground forces.

The government strategy was to strike at a number of points along the line simultaneously. One of these thrusts, the government said, isolated several thousand insurgent troops in the Celadas sector, eight miles north of Teruel.

Disputes from insurgent sources said that Franco's troops defending the Calamocha-Teruel highway had captured an undetermined number of North American volunteers during an unsuccessful government assault on one point of the line.

Barbers Class Is Host At Banquet Last Night

The barbers class at the Appleton Vocational school, finished with its course of study last night. Last night was host to barbers from Neenah-Menasha, Kaukauna, Kimberly, and Little Chute at a banquet at Hotel Appleton.

Herb Heilig, director of the Appleton Vocational school, and C. J. Offerdahl, deputy commissioner from the state trade practice department, were speakers.

It Is Said..

That, according to a resident of the Fourth ward, it might be well to pass maps of Appleton among the teachers in the high school. The resident called the Post-Crescent yesterday and related the following story:

When it was decided by school authorities to close schools Wednesday, teachers helped call homes of students to notify them. One teacher called a Fourth ward home and said, "We are getting in touch with students, especially those living outside the city, to let them know there is no school tomorrow."

Restore Normal Road Conditions In Most Sections

Rising Wind Clogging Highways Near Marquette, Mich.

Marquette, Mich. — (AP) — Rural school children in this area were ordered home at noon today by school authorities on advice of state police after a rising wind began to drift highways shut for the second time this week.

Little snow accompanied the wind, which shifted abruptly from southwest to northwest this morning, but the wind was expected to reach a 30-40 mile intensity before the day ended. New drifts forming in the channels cut through the heavy snowfall of earlier this week already were giving highway crews trouble.

State police ordered United States Highway 41 south of Marquette closed because of the difficulty maintaining a single open lane.

Milwaukee — (AP) — Work crews, with shovel and snowplow, were restoring normal highway conditions today in northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan.

Wisconsin's main roads were open to traffic, although on some lanes were too narrow for cars to pass. Rapid progress was reported in the attack on 20-foot drifts which buried state and federal routes in the Michigan peninsula.

The Chicago and North Western railroad reported a rotary plow reached Ishpeming at 9:45 a. m. after a 17-hour fight on drifts blocking the line from Escanaba. Road officials said operations on most other lines in this territory were approaching regular schedule. No word had been heard here at noon, however, on the line running west of Iron river.

Milder weather, but more snow, were predicted for tonight and tomorrow. Lower temperatures for Saturday afternoon were forecast.

Claims Indians Built Ancient Skyscrapers

Milwaukee — (AP) — That the American Indian preceded the white man in the building of skyscrapers was one of the revelations of Gregory Mason, New York, author and explorer, in a talk here yesterday before the Wisconsin Women's club.

"The Indians of North America contributed more to civilization than we realize," Mason said, "We found evidences of their tall buildings in Central America. Indians, also, were the first surgeons on this continent and knew something about anaesthetics."

American Cheese Production Dips During December

Lighter Than Year Ago but Higher Than 1927-36 Average

Chicago — (AP) — December manufacture of American cheese in Wisconsin declined seasonally by 21 per cent from November and though 10 per cent higher than the 1927-36 December average, totaled 121 per cent lighter than in 1936, it was revealed today in a review of business conditions in the Seventh Federal Reserve district.

Figures released by the research and statistics department of the federal reserve bank here showed distribution of American cheese November and the 10-year average, but 20 per cent below a year earlier.

United States inventories of cheese again declined less than seasonally and the excess over 1933-37 average had expanded to more than nine million pounds as of Jan. 1. Prices weakened and in mid-January were off about 2 cents from a month earlier. Wisconsin American cheese production for the calendar year 1937 totaled 104 per cent lighter than in 1936, while distribution of the product was 7 per cent lower.

More Butter Produced

The production of dairy products during December again conformed to seasonal trend. Butter manufacture in the Seventh district totaled 31 per cent higher than in November and 1 per cent above the year earlier, but remained below the 1927-36 average, being 101 per cent smaller in this comparison.

Still seasonally heavier than current production, Seventh district sales of the commodity aggregated 3 per cent less than in November December average, and the gain over the corresponding 1936 month narrowed to 51 per cent.

Butter production for December in the United States showed a more favorable trend than in the Seventh district, expanding over November and totaling above December, 1936, and the 10-year average. Consumption of competitive substitutes has remained heavy, but imports have been much lighter than in 1936 and 1937.

For the Calendar Year 1937

Seventh district sales were 74 per cent heavier than in 1936, although butter production for the year was 4 per cent less in the district and about 1 per cent lighter nationally. Inventories of the commodity on Jan. 1 in the United States showed a less than seasonal decline from Dec. 1, but remained well below the 1933-37 average for the date.

After pronounced strength over the autumn period, prices at Chicago for creamery extras, 92 score, declined abruptly in the latter half of December, closing the month at $3.22, or 7 cents below the December high, and only slightly above prices prevailing last spring. However, relative steadiness was maintained in the first three weeks of January.

Governor Murphy Intends to Visit Upper Peninsula

Plans to Study Welfare And Relief Problems During Tour

Lansing, Mich. — (AP) — Governor Frank Murphy advised his office Thursday of plans for an early trip to the upper peninsula to survey its relief needs.

The governor, in a telephone message from Ann Arbor, said he also would visit the Michigan college of Mining and Technology at Houghton to determine its needs. He has not denied published reports that he planned to reorganize the board in control of the college and oust Grover C. Dillman as president. Dillman is a former Republican highway commissioner.

Murphy said he would visit Houghton, Calumet, Ironwood, Iron Mountain, Ishpeming, Ontonagon, Marquette and possibly other cities "within the next two or three weeks."

Acute Problems

He said he considered the welfare and relief problem in the northern counties as acute as in Detroit, and said he would give it personal attention.

At Ann Arbor, the governor said another day would be required for completion of a "routine physical examination" at university hospital but reiterated his boast "I'm feeling fine."

"The doctors are pleased to find that I have gained weight and am in such good condition" he said. "I've put on 10 or 12 pounds since September."

The governor said a report from Budget Director Harold D. Smith indicated sufficient relief funds were available until Feb. 8.

"If the situation becomes critical, especially in the upper peninsula," he said, "I shall call a special session of the legislature to deal with it or take any other that may be advisable."

SEVENTY YEARS of service and activity as a Catholic benevolent society will be completed next month by St. Joseph Benevolent society who will celebrate the anniversary with a banquet at 5:30 Sunday afternoon at St. Joseph's hall. Loessel, president of the society, will introduce the toastmaster, who will in turn introduce members of the clergy who are sons of members of the society.

Al Nitz will present vocal solos, Miss Carol Griesbach will give a dance number, and the Martzahl sisters will appear in musical selections. Richard Verhoeven will give a tap dance and the jubilee octet of St. Joseph's choir will sing under the direction of Prof. A. J. Theiss.

Name Heads Of Mission Committees

A playlet entitled "Changing Places" will be presented by the following cast: Miss Cecile Haas, Miss Theresa Haas, Joseph Theis, and Stewart Pesser. The program will close with the audience singing "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name."

The society will approach holy communion in a body at a high mass at 8 o'clock Sunday morning at St. Joseph's church. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Gerard Hesse, O. M. Cap.

During the 70 years of the society's existence, it has grown from a small group to a membership of 217 persons. It has expended in sick benefits $44,673.91, and in funeral benefits $23,100, in addition to thousands of dollars for other religious, educational and benevolent purposes.

On Feb. 2, 1868, a group of men who had immigrated from Germany and were members of St. Mary congregation, the only Catholic congregation in Appleton, associated themselves together for mutual protection in case of sickness or death and for the further purpose of cultivating and preserving German customs and ideals and the practice of their mother tongue. So strong was this sentiment with these early settlers that soon after the founding of the society they fostered the organization of a German Catholic congregation in Appleton, bought a piece of property and brought about the erection of the first St. Joseph's church. It was built on what is now Elm street facing Lawrence street. The first service was held Oct. 18, 1868, with the Rev. Frank Uhlemayr, pastor of St. Mary church in Menasha, in charge, he having been appointed to attend to the new congregation in Appleton and hold services here every two weeks.

The church was dedicated by the Rt. Rev. Melchior, bishop of Green Bay, Dec. 13, 1868, and thus the dream of these Catholic pioneers of German birth, the founders of St. Joseph society, to pour forth their prayers and hear the word of God in their mother tongue came true in less than one year after the society was founded.

During the last 70 years St. Joseph society has been one of the bulwarks of St. Joseph's congregation, leading especially in the earlier days in its various activities, and as a social agency has offered protection to the male members of the congregation in case of sickness and death.

Milwaukee Club To Help Sale of Wisconsin Cheese

Group Will Study New Ideas for Advertising State Product

All regular meetings of the Milwaukee Advertising club during the first six months of this year will be given over to a discussion of ideas for advertising and merchandising Wisconsin State Brand cheese, R. C. Swanson, Outagamie county agricultural agent, has been informed by Sidney Lightstone, program chairman of the club.

To develop these ideas through research and study, the club has resolved itself into an imaginary corporation whose job is to sell Wisconsin's annual production of 270 million pounds of American cheese.

American, or cheddar cheese was selected as the subject of the search because it was thought that the price of this type of cheese directly affects the value of all other varieties of Wisconsin-made cheese.

Each meeting will take the form of an advertising clinic. At the end of the six months' study awards will be made to persons submitting the best advertising and merchandising program.

Simple Home Test Shows Quality of Egg Expert Says

Grading Not Required Under Law, but Truthful Labeling Is

Homemakers cannot easily make the technical tests used by egg graders who "candle" eggs to determine quality, but they can learn the egg grades on the Wisconsin markets and thus get their money's worth, it is pointed out by C. Howard King, state poultry expert, in a letter to R. C. Swanson, county agent.

For a simple home test of egg quality, break the egg on a plate. King suggests. If the yolk stands up round like a ball, if the thick white around the yolk is firm, then it is an excellent egg.

Such eggs are classed as Grade A under Wisconsin's Egg Marketing law, which is now in its fifth year of operation. This law provides that all eggs sold must be honestly represented as to quality and forbid the sale of inedible eggs.

Grading of eggs is not compulsory under this law but truthful labeling is required. Eggs are bought and sold as Grade A, Grade B and undergrades; or for those who still wish to gamble on the unknown, they may buy and sell ungraded eggs. Producers of eggs are not required by law to label or grade eggs of their own production, but they must not represent eggs as of a better quality than they actually are.

Grade A is the breakfast egg, suitable for soft boiling, poaching and for all dishes in which delicate flavor is important.

Although Grade A eggs are preferable at all times and for all purposes, one cannot always afford top quality Grade A eggs for cooking purposes. This is especially true during the winter months. When the price spread between grades is considerable, one can economize by using Grade B eggs for cooking but should insist on Grade A eggs for all table purposes.

Egg grades tell the story of quality. Wise consumers look for grade names and buy only those eggs which are plainly labeled with grade names.

Landrace Hogs Show Higher Per Cent of Choice Meat Cuts

That hogs can be bred to dress out a higher percentage of choice cuts, hams, bacon and loin, has been shown by comparison of Danish Landrace hogs with typical American breeds, R. C. Swanson, county agent, has been informed by the United States Department of Agriculture. Those meat specialists compared 55 Landrace carcasses with 240 carcasses of common domestic breeds.

The Landrace carcasses produced 18.3 per cent hams, 12.4 per cent bacon, and 16.4 per cent loin. The American breeds dressed out 17.5 per cent ham, 12.3 per cent bacon, and 12.3 per cent loin.

Landrace carcasses weighing 175 pounds averaged 1.35 pounds more ham, 0.71 pound more bacon, and 6.97 pounds more loin than the average carcass of American breeds of the same weight. Some American breeds produce as large percentage of loin, but fall lower in the percentage of bacon. The head of the average Landrace hog also weighs 17 pounds less than the head of the average American hog.

Landrace hogs were imported by the department in May, 1934 for experimental purposes. With the aid of the American swine industry in mind, especially the more effective selection of breeding stock, the department selected the highly regarded Danish breed for study under American conditions.

The department does not have any breeding stock available for sale, and is working with the breed purely on a research basis which may lead to the development of better qualities in established American breeds.

Heavy Rains Test of Soil Erosion Control

Heavy rains provide an acid test for erosion-control practices which many farmers have adopted to conserve soil and moisture. Reports received by R. C. Swanson, county agent, from the soil conservation service indicate these practices are helping to stabilize stream flow as well as prevent erosion damage.

On one of two neighboring watersheds in the vicinity of Wadesboro, N. C., the farmers are co-operating in a program of soil and water conservation; on the other, the land is largely unprotected by erosion-control measures.

During a heavy storm when 4 inches of rain fell in 24 hours and 2 inches in a single hour, Brown Creek, which drains through the protected watershed, stayed within its channel at all but a few points and caused no damage to adjacent croplands.

But in the unprotected Gould's Fork drainage basin, the rain ran off rapidly, swelling the stream and causing it to leave its banks at many points. In some places a foot of silt was deposited. Analysis of water samples showed that Gould's Fork was carrying six times as much silt per gallon as Brown Creek, where the water was relatively clear.

On muck soils, have been invited to meet at 120 Thursday, Feb. 3, in the soils building of the state university. Considerable interest has been developed in the last few years in the growing of potatoes and other crops on muck land.

Nectar Supply Varies According to Locality

Local conditions, soils and climate seem to influence the nectar supply of plants from which bees gather their raw material, according to a bulletin received by R. C. Swanson, Outagamie county agricultural agent from the United States Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Science has not solved nearly all the problems raised by the bees in their search for honey material. W. J. Nalon, bee specialist in the United States Department of Agriculture, notes that alfalfa is a good nectar producer in the area west of the Mississippi river, but is of slight importance to the east. Buckwheat honey is well known for its dark color and characteristic flavor but nearly all of it comes from a relatively small area near Lakes Erie and Ontario; elsewhere in this country buckwheat is a honey plant of only slight importance. White clover is widely grown and is a first class honey source, but in certain localities it gives the honey bee little or no nectar.

LAST NIGHT'S GAMES
Town Taxi 30, Merchants 27.
Fox River 43, Y. M. C. A. 32.
Wire Works 69, Lutz Ice 26.

FOX River Paper company hung up its eighth straight win in the Y. M. C. A. Basketball league last evening by 43 to 32 score in a game that was considerably closer for a time than the final figures indicate. The contest was a nip and tuck battle and finally went to the Fox River because of its "staying" powers.

The Y. M. C. A. locked horns with the Papermakers at the first tossup and kept pace in the scoring. The quarter ended 9 to 8 for the Papermakers. In the second quarter the Y five sprinted ahead and enjoyed a 4-point margin when the halftime halt was called.

Fox River came back in the third quarter, however, and overcame the Y lead and held a 27 to 24 advantage of its own when the third stanza closed. In the fourth period the Fox River staying power showed and it won handily. Grishaber and Womser each scored six baskets for the Fox River and Krause four. For the Y. M. C. A. Reif showed four baskets. Palchich and Millard three.

Merchants Muff Chance Appleton Merchants muffed a perfect chance to win their first game and trip the Town Taxi because they couldn't make free throws. They counted one point at the gift line in 14 chances. The final score of the contest was Taxi 30, Merchants 27.

The Taxi went ahead, 8 to 6, in the first period and showed a 17 to 12 advantage at the half. In the third quarter it was 25 to 19 for the Taxi. The Merchants outscored the Taxi from the field, 13 baskets to 11, but the miserable attempts at the free throw mark left the Merchants behind in the scoring. Kapp and Sager each scored five field goals for the Merchants while Ehke had five field goals and Zussman three for the Taxi.

In the other game the Wire Works turned on the steam and walloped the Lutz Ice company by a 69 to 26 score. Karel Zimmerman was the fair-haired lad for the Wires with 31 points from 11 field goals and 9 free throws. He made the nine gift shots in ten chances. Bill Lesser, young county five field goals and two free throws and Ken Slattery five field goals and five free throws. The Icemen were paced by Wetten- gel with four baskets and five free throws.

The Wires led 16 to 5 at the quarter, 32 to 11 at the half and 51 to 18 at the third quarter.

Whizzer White Is Whizzing Around
Basketball Court

Boulder, Colo. — Yes, the Whizzer is still in there whizzing. Byron White, All-America gridder, Phi Beta Kappa, Rhodes scholar and the target for a $15,000 pro football contract, has swapped cleats for rubber soles as a guard on Colorado's basketball team.

Athletes and coaches will tell you it's hard to make the sudden switch but this hasn't worried the whizzer.

Two weeks after he played against Rice in the Cotton bowl football game Jan. 1, White had won his regular job on the cage team. He was All-Rocky Mountain conference guard last year.

Some experts contend White is as capable on the basketball floor as he is with a football. His coach, Forrest (Frosty) Cox, former Kansas university football and basketball star, says:

"I'm firmly convinced Byron could make the all-conference basketball team in any conference in the country."

As for that $15,000 contract Pittsburgh Pirate officials said they have mailed him—"I'll believe it when I see it," White said. "I won't say what I'll do until it and I get it."

To White for Grid Job

Pittsburgh —(U)— A contract calling for $15,000 for one season's play with the Pittsburgh Pirate pros was in the mail today addressed to Byron "Whizzer" White, All-America quarterback at the University of Colorado.

The Pittsburgh club of the National professional football league drew White in the draft a month ago and Coach Johnny Blood was reported then to have offered him $15,000 for two seasons, but to have been turned down. White has obtained a Rhodes scholarship and said he would not play pro football.

Secretary John Mayer of the Pirates said the club mailed him a contract yesterday, nevertheless, offering $15,000 for one season.

Grieshaber finished with a 599 series and J. Bosch rapped a 211 game, but their team, Outagamie Milks, dropped two games to Puritan Bakery, led by E. Captain who spilled a 238 game and 571 series.

Sumnicht shot games of 209, 204 and 195 to reach his high series, H. Hensch rapped a 239 and R. Hamm a 208 as Quality Biscuits swept their match with Cohen's Foods. For the losers, Kronschnabel had a 244 game and 581 series and Wichmann a 209 game.

With H. Christian smashing a 208 game and 565 series, Elm Tree Bakery won two from Wisconsin Distributing Company and chalked up the best team scores, 970 for game and 2742 for match. In the losers' column, H. Theis had 233, D. Piette 204, 203 and a 589 series and L. Meyers 201.

E. Stach picked off a 206 game and 581 series as Good Luck out-bowled Liethen Grains in two games, O. Griesbach led the Grains, rapping a 222 game and 566 series.

G. Pernoski's 558 series, A. Lemke's 206, and H. Bushman's 201 were standouts as Verifine Ice Cream added two games to their list in a match with Spilker Bakery. For Spilker, W. Delgen had a 537 series and H. Lemke a 210 game.

50 Iceboats Will Race at Madison

Madison —(U)— Northwestern Ice Yachting association clubs of four states are expected to send about 50 iceboats to Madison for the association's annual regatta to begin on Lake Mendota Sunday.

A five day program for entries in Classes A, B, C, and E has been arranged. There will be about 20 races, the schedule calling for one race in the several classes each day.

The association had been invited to compete on Lake Winnebago at Oshkosh this year, but poor ice conditions forced up-state officials to cancel preparations and transfer the meet here.

Carl Bernard, Madison pilot who will sail Fred Jungbluth's "Fritz" in defense of the Class A championship, said the local Four Lakes Ice Yacht club sent out invitations Wednesday.

"Mendota is in fine shape," he said. "We should have great sailing conditions once the temperature gets away from zero."

Opening events Sunday will be the eight-mile C and E class races. The bigger A and B boats will hold their first 12-mile contest in the afternoon. Judges, as usual, will be from the competing clubs.

Bernard said the following 11 clubs are expected to send boats: Lake St. Clair of Detroit; Toledo, O.; Battle Creek, Mich.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Menomonee, Mich.; Beau Skeeter club, Williams Bay, Lake Geneva; Oconomowoc; Pewaukee; Oshkosh; Penguin Club of Fox Lake, Ill., and Madison.

Would Change
Tourney Dates*Class A Schools Ask State
Cage Meet be Held
Week Earlier

Milwaukee — The state high school basketball tournament will be staged a week earlier than originally planned this spring if the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic association succeeds in its efforts to move up the dates of the numerous Class B and C district and regional meets.

Original dates of the state meet were Mar. 29 to Apr. 1 at Madison, but the WIAA is yielding to the plea of Class A teams to hold the championships from Mar. 22 to Mar. 25. The Class A schools say that there is too long an interval—often three weeks—between the close of their conference schedules and the state tournaments. The Class B and C schools, they contend, stay at their peak by taking part in district and regional meets. Class A contestants, on the other hand, have nothing to look forward to from the first week in March until the last week of the month, and lose interest in the state tournament. Accordingly, the district and regional meets may be held earlier, or the 10-day period between the close of the regional meets and the opening of the state tournament may be reduced to two or three days. The University of Wisconsin athletic department has granted the use of the fieldhouse a week earlier and now all that remains is for the WIAA to hustle up preliminary competition.

De Correvont, who scored at least one touchdown in every game in which he played, and once scored nine in a single contest, also has starred in baseball. Four major league clubs already have sounded him out.

Greenberg Says Yanks
Are Due to Go to Pieces

MIAMI BEACH, FLA. —(U)— Hank Greenberg's intuition expanded under a Florida sun today and exploded with two strong hunches, viz:

1. The Yankees will blow up this season.

2. Hank Greenberg will hit a lot of home runs.

"I've got a hunch," the Detroit slugger said, "that the Yankees are going to blow up in a large way. I've got a feeling something they won't like is going to happen to them. I don't know what it will be, but I hope it's nothing trivial."

In Great Shape
Greenberg said, the Tigers will be a cinch for the pennant.

"As far as we are concerned," he said, "the Yankees are the only other team in the league." Then, as an afterthought: "Except those Bostonians. They got in our hair last year. I can't understand it."

Greenberg appeared to be in great shape after a session of swimming and handball.

"I never felt better," he said. "In fact, I would be surprised if this wasn't going to be my year. I think I am going to bat that old apple around some this year. I might even knock Mickey Cochrane happy—and that's a lot of home runs."

Hit 40 Home Runs
Greenberg poled 40 last year, six less than Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees, the leader.

Greenberg said he thinks what the Tigers need is a little more cooperation from the rest of the circuit.

"Nobody except the White Sox and ourselves will do anything about those Yankees," he said. "Look at the Senators—they won one game in the stadium. If the rest of the league would give us a little support in attending to the Yankees we wouldn't have any trouble at all winning the pennant. We may not anyway. We've got a nice bunch of youngsters coming along."

19 Players Have Signed
Chicago Cub Contracts

Only three Cubs are reported displaced with initial offers—Frank Demaree, Bill Herman and Bill Jurgens.

H. Van Grinsven defeated C. Van Handel at 150 pounds.

LITTLE CHUTE—Fighting three rounds for regulation 3-minute periods in preparation for golden gloves competition at Green Bay, Roger Koehn won over Red Siebers and Jerome Helf outpointed Gordon Baumgard in the double windup of a card at St. John High school gymnasium last night.
Koehn, a southpaw, scored a knockdown in the second round of his bout with Siebers. Siebers battled on even terms during the first and third rounds but lost the second after a furious exchange of blows. Jerome Helf showed more aggressiveness in the first round to gain a lead over Baumgard. Baumgard opened up in the second and carried with him body blows. Both fighters hit mildly in the third round trying for a knockout.
Becker Lenz and Smoky Van Bortel landed solid punches in the first and third rounds but Lenz beat Van Bortel to the punch with a fast right in the second round and it proved the deciding factor. Ken Hurst was awarded each round in a bout with Ralph Jansen. Hurst, a freshman, hit equally well with both hands and never took a backward step.
Woody McCabe piled up points in the first and second round but wilted in the third. Demuth forced the fight in the last round but found McCabe an elusive target and failed to collect enough points to offset McCabe's winning margin. Al Huisman capitalized on a reach advantage to win the first and third rounds from Cletus Hurst. Hurst snapped Huisman's head with a short right jab frequently.

Slugging Match
In a wild slugging match, Hank Van Grinsven defeated C. Van Handel. Both fighters tossed the art of boxing over the ropes and hampered each other throughout the contest. Jimmy Koehn won his first fight from J. Lenz. The boys fought cautiously in the first frame but Koehn opened up in the remaining two rounds.

H. Van Langfelt was too fast for Bob St. Aubin and took the first and third periods. St. Aubin relied in the second but Van Langfelt counted heavily when he forced St. Aubin to the ropes. Joe Winous won the second and third rounds of his bout with Joe Hinkens by landing often and hard.
Tuesday evening the St. John High school boxers will tangle with the Kaukauna High school squad in the first of a home and home series.

Although the scheduled meeting of the Outagamie County Basketball league fizzled out because some of the managers figured it was too cold and the roads too rough, Kaukauna Knights of Columbus took to the telephone and got approval of six managers to add three new men to their list. These are "Red" Koehnke, a forward, Ross Farwell, guard, and "Chuck" Arnold, center. Arnold formerly lived in Appleton but now makes his home in Kaukauna.
Last night's session was attended only by Manager Norbert Berg of Kaukauna and Manager Wallace Satorius of Black Creek. The latter asked for postponement of his game with Kaukauna at Little Chute tonight because the Creelers will have several players working at a president's ball at Black Creek.
Seymour started for the meeting but found the roads tough and telephoned from Kimberly. Manager Row was advised there wasn't a quorum for a meeting and that he didn't have to make the rest of the trip if he didn't want to. However, he announced that he would seek approval of managers to strengthen

HOCKEY STAR HAS RELATIVES HERE

When Roger "Broadway" Jenkins, above, recently rejoined the Chicago Black Hawks, the team with which he originally broke into the National Hockey League, he rejoined the last remaining figure beside himself of the biggest swap ever made in the league.
"Broadway," who joined the Hawks in 1931, went to the Montreal Maroons shortly before the opening of the 1934-35 season when Chicago traded Jenkins and Lionel Conacher to Montreal Canadiens for Howie Moroz, considered by many hockey experts as being the greatest forward the game ever knew. Defense player Marty Burke and goalie Lorne Chabot, the latter named to fill the spot at goal vacated by the death of Charlie Gardiner, the greatest net-minder in the game. Subsequently Conacher

Sixty Entries Received For New London Ski Meet

NEW LONDON—Sixty entries had been received up to last night by the New London Ski club for the annual tournament at Mosquito hill Sunday afternoon. It was announced today by C. H. Kellogg, secretary. Still more are expected as the date of the meet draws closer. Registrations indicate that the tournament this year will show a much better class of riders than previous years and more spectacular jumpers.
Ted Soperski of Iron Mountain, an outstanding Class A rider and holder of numerous records, turned in his entry yesterday. Ted is well known as a spectacular performer and heads a family trio of skiing brothers. His brother John is entered in Class B and Ray is an accomplished Class C jumper. Two of the brothers usually join in a thrilling twin jump during the course of a meet.
Tony Osterman, Wisconsin Class B champion, also became listed in the number of entrants yesterday. Ten riders have been entered by the Central Wisconsin club at Rosholt, seven from the Tri-Norse club at Wisconsin Rapids, five have been promised from Munising and two from Plymouth.

Skiers are classified by ages with the youngsters in the Class C group, often providing jumps as thrilling as Class A riders. Class A is composed of riders of all ages who have qualified by outstanding performances.
The Mosquito Hill slide, a mile east of New London on County Trunk Highway 8, was put in final shape for the meet by a crew of workers yesterday. Local skiers are expected to ride the hill at every opportunity the rest of this week.
The work yesterday consisted of removing some three or four feet of snow which had drifted into the cut at the bottom of the hill, and packing snow on the scaffold. The hill was reported in first class condition at the end of the day's work. The meet will get under way at 1:30 Sunday afternoon.

Giant Officials Breathe Easier as Ott Accepts Offer

Third Sacker Has Never Questioned First Contract Submitted

BY GAYLE TALBOT
NEW YORK—Mel Ott, the "little hotfoot" of the Giants, has mailed in his signed contract, so it looks like there will be a baseball campaign despite the current holdout epidemic.
If the modest star from Gretna, La., ever does fail to send a signed contract back by return post, the magnates might begin to worry. For the day each January when Mel's signature hits the Giants' desk, the word goes around: "All's well."
Though he's been a star almost from the day John McGraw yanked him out of Gretna High school, a kid of 16, Ott has never once even questioned the first contract offered him. The coming season will be his 13th as an active Giant.
How much more money Ott might have made out of the Giants by giving them an annual spring argument is difficult to reckon. But Ott is satisfied, and he's done all right.

Shifted to Third Base
His salary for the coming season is generally believed to be around $17,000, making him possibly the highest paid infielder in the National league. He was, of course, an outfielder for all his big league career until last year.

Manager Bill Terry shifted him to third base in mid-season last year. He'll probably end his days now at the cozy corner.
Ott's unfailing serenity and his refusal to join the annual holdout brigade have gained him the title "the perfect player." He isn't quite 29 yet and probably will get a few more salary hikes before he's through. Maybe his way of doing business has its rewards.
Last season was one of Mel's poorest. He hit only 294 and was benched for a period. That hadn't happened to him before. A player who had been in the habit of kicking up a salary rumpus in his fat years might have been docked for such a lapse. But Ott got a raise.
Ott was the third Giant regular to sign. Johnny C. Hubbell and first baseman Pichery McCreary had already accepted the club's original terms. Only Hank Lieber, outfielder, and Harry Danning, catcher, were listed as genuine holdouts.
The Yankees reduced their worries somewhat with the signing of George Selkirk, slugging rightfielder, who came down from his home at Rochester to reach an agreement.

Sam Snead Favored in $5,000 Oakland Meet

Oakland, Calif.—America's leading professional golfers, on their yearly winter tournament swing, start a 72-hole battle against par today in the $5,000 Oakland open.
Some 200 golfers were entered, including virtually all of the pros who played in the recent southern California tournaments.
They teed off for the first 18 holes at Sequoyia Country club. The 160 leaders will qualify for tomorrow's 18 holes, and the low 60 thereafter will go into the 36-hole finals Sunday.
Among the hot favorites was defending champion Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., who cracked par by two strokes with a winning 268 last year.
Snead's chief rivals include Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., winner of the Pasadena open; long-driving Jimmy Thomson of Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa. Byron Nelson, Horton Smith, Harry Cooper, Jimmy Hines, Johnny Revolta and Lawson Little.

Marion Principal At Tourney Meeting

Marion—Principal L. K. Forrest attended a meeting of basketball tournament managers at Green Bay last week. One of the things discussed was a change in regional tournament plans. The centers for these will be selected after the results of the Class C district tournament are known. Marion, if it wins the Marion district tournament stands a chance of going to either Antigo, DePere, Neenah or Stevens Point regional tournament.
It also was decided at the meeting that the new meet schedule will be used exclusively in all tournaments. The third place game will be played the last night of the tournament and silver medals will be given the winner.
The teams in the Marion district are Shiocton, Scandinavia, Marion, Iola, Amherst, Tigerton, Weyauwega and Bear Creek.

Prominent Riders in Whitehall Ski Tourney

Whitehall—Le Moine Batson, Sverre Fredheim, and Paul and Walter Bielata will head a brilliant field of riders in Class A competition in the sixth annual Whitehall Ski club tournament Sunday.
Batson will command the colors of the Central Wisconsin Ski club, Rosholt, while Fredheim, former Olympic star, will ride for the Norwegian-American Athletic club, of Minneapolis. The Bielata brothers are students at the University of Wisconsin.
Officials of the Norge Ski club, Chicago, have assured club officials here at least two of their top notch riders will be entered in Class A competition. Guttorm Paulson, "large skier," won the tournament championship last year.
Fredheim holds the hill record of 163 feet, made in 1935. He won Class A honors in 1933 and 1934.

Bear Creek Cagers Trip Shiocton Five

Bear Creek—Bear Creek city basketball team defeated Shiocton city team by a 29 to 14 score last evening at Shiocton. Next Sunday afternoon the Creelers will clash with New London city team at New London.
Bear Creek got away to a 12 to 4 lead in the opening quarter and maintained the edge to the half, which ended 13 to 10. In the third quarter the tempo slowed down and the final period the Creelers scored ten points while holding Shiocton scoreless.

NORTHERN BASS REST IN WINTER

By O. Warren Smith
REMEMBER fishing through the ice in the month of January, a number of years ago, and one of the party pulled out a fine one-pound smallmouth, the first and only time I ever knew of such a fish being taken in the North in midwinter. This happened over in Pepin County, Wisconsin, and the lake was but an abandoned channel of the Chippewa River. Up to that time I had given little thought to the fact that we never took bass when ice fishing, supposing "they were not feeding," the well worn angler's excuse for failure. So I began to study the subject, and discovered that our so-called basses—for the reader knows of course that the bass is not a true bass, but a sunfish—"hibernate" when the temperature of the water falls below say, 50 degrees.

Our difficulty lies here, we think of hibernation as a deep sleep, a suspension of all activity, a quasi death. But we know that a black bear, when disturbed in his mid-winter sleep, is not exactly dead! Glance at the Dictionary: Webster says that the word means, "To winter; pass the winter in close quarters, in a torpid or lethargic state." That is exactly what the northern bass does, worms its way under a log or stump, perhaps buries itself in the mud—which I doubt—and waits for the temperature of the water to rise. In the South, as we all know, the bass feed the year around, and I presume that is the reason why these fish exceed the Northern in weight, they keep right on eating and growing the year 'round!

In "Book of the Black Bass," first edition, Dr. Henshall says, "During a residence of ten years in Wisconsin, where fishing through the ice was constantly practiced during the winter, and where tons of pickrel, pike-perch and yellow-perch were so taken in a single season, I never knew of a single black bass being taken in that manner except very late in winter, or in early spring, say in March, just before the breaking up of the ice." And quotes Dr. C. D. Estes, of Lake City, Minnesota, as follows, "The pike and pickerel are the only fish taken here in the winter—I am quite sure that not a single bass was ever caught here through the ice. I have for years tried all depths of water to raise one, or to discover one, but have thus far failed. I must believe, then, that they hibernate."

Yet, well up the Chippewa River, north of Lake Pepin, I saw one taken through the ice, and it had swallowed the worm which my companion was using in quest of yellow perch. There is no question in my mind but that the black bass do "feed" during the long winter, as do some other local active game fish; but that they "sleep" as some assert, is as foolish as to say they "bury themselves in the mud and become immovable."

St. Therese Quintet Defeats Neenah Team

St. Therese cagers won a close game from St. Margaret Mary of Neenah, 18 to 16, at Roosevelt Junior High school gymnasium this week in a Catholic Boy conference. Punta Gerda, Fla.—(P)—Jean Bauer drew upon the experience of many years in competition today in this advice to young women golfers:
"Learn the fundamentals from a competent teacher—and above all, play golf for fun."
The comely Providence, R. I., player was paired against Patty Berg of Minneapolis in the finals of the championship of champions tournament after she upset the favored Kathryn Hemphill of Columbia, S. C., on the 19th hole yesterday.

Two Chuter Teams to Play on Hilbert Floor

Little Chute—The Little Chute Legion girls basketball team and the Merchants, a men's team, will go to Hilbert Saturday night to battle two teams from that city.
The Merchants are a first-rate aggregation and the squad is planning to battle the Legion men's team for the village championship. The Legion Girls still are diehards, waiting for a night when they can play a preliminary to one of the County league games in Little Chute.

SEES BASKETBALL GETTING SLOWER

Atlanta, Ga.—(P)—Dutch Dehnert, a member of the Celtic pro basketball team, believes the new basketball rules designed to speed up the game will defeat their own purpose. "Abolishing the center jump," he says, "may serve the purpose for a time, but once teams get used to the new trend and eventually make the game much slower than before."

HORSESHOES BRING LUCK?

Sydney, N. S. W.—(P)—Rachor owners here are wondering whether horse-shoeing bills are unnecessary. Lady Airlie, a filly, ran "barefooted" to win her second start at odds of 33-to-1.

GUS SUHR GETS 'HET UP'

Gus Suhr, first baseman and captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates, got so hot under the collar when he received his 1938 contract in San Francisco, in which he was asked to play better ball for less money, that he grabbed the nearest charged-water bottle and cooled off in this fashion. Suhr said the contract went back by return mail—unsigned.

COMMON SENSE CONSERVATION

By L. H. KINGSTON

GREEN BAY—Trout fishing in Wisconsin is essentially the sport of native anglers, only a few of our out-of-state tourists come here equipped with trout tackle. The reason is, of course, that trout are harder to find and more difficult to catch than lake fish—then too, our guest anglers have little patience with the swarms of mosquitoes that beset the trout fisherman.

So it would seem that whatever we anglers live in this state should choose to do about our trout fishing in the way of a short or open season or a smaller bag limit could be done without much worry as to the effect it would have on our important tourist business.

And there is no denying that something should be done about trout fishing. Even fair trout fishing is pretty hard to find in any of our streams, and as for native speckled trout, they are getting rare indeed.

Factors commonly recognized as contributing to this condition are good roads and the modern automobile, increased numbers of anglers, and in many cases the activity of beavers in feeder streams.

More serious than all of these, at least as far as brook trout are concerned is our failure to protect them during hot weather in summer when stream temperatures rise above normal and these fish are forced to seek refuge where the cold feeder brooks pour in. Here they are all concentrated in a very small area and it is often a simple matter for an angler to fill his creel without moving from his tracks. When this school of trout has been caught the whole stream has been cleaned out. That is one big reason why now after six hot summers in a row, we find our trout fishing so poor.

Wouldn't it be a simple matter to prevent fishing in all places where cold brooks flow into trout streams by erecting the conservation department's usual "Fish Refuge" signs after which these spots would be strictly guarded by our conservation wardens.

Yes, I know this plan would add to the duties of our already overworked game wardens. I know that although it would stop the lawless angler it would not always stop the outlaw who could sneak in at night with a net and do plenty of damage, but I think some such plan should be tried.

If it does not work then there is only one thing left to do—close the trout season each year after July 1st until we get our trout fishing back. This would be rather strong medicine and no one would dislike it more than I, but it would be better than having so many of our trout streams as they are now—beautiful but fishless.

Comiskey Wary of 1938 Predictions for Squad

Chicago—(P)—J. Louis Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, isn't going off the deep end about the chances of his club in the 1938 American league race.
"This year's team looks pretty good to me but I'm not going to pick them to win a pennant," chuckled the portly magnate. "I did that last year and it seemed my prognosticating worked against me, with the club hitting a slump every time it got near first place. But I still say the club that wins the flag will have the Sox to beat."

Winter is Best Time to Put on Few More Pounds

BY ELSIE PIERCE

There's no time like the present to get down and do whatever it is you want to see done. One of the best golden rules is: "do not put off for tomorrow what you can do today."

It is particularly applicable to the subject of weight gaining. The fact is that this is the best time of the year to turn angles into softly rounded curves. It all resolves itself into two good reasons why winter is weight gaining time. First, we exercise less. Second, we eat more. The body needs more food, particularly the rich, heavy fuel foods to keep it warm. The body actually prefers these foods at this time of the year. During the winter we find salads and light foods more palatable. In the winter we relish cream soups and starches, butter, sugar, poultry, meats, fish, vegetables, stuffing, salad dressing, rich desserts.

While the other half of the world is waiting about gaining weight in winter, the thin ones have the fates on their side.

Try This Program

In the first place, if you suspect that you are run-down, that there is something organically wrong with you, if you have symptoms of any disease, see your physician before you attempt anything. Sudden loss of weight or sudden loss of appetite should be checked immediately. It is up to your physician to determine the cause and map out a routine for the checking.

If you have had a check-up or are reasonably sure that you are in fine health start an early to bed and early to rise program. Sleep in a well ventilated room. Do a few setting up exercises night and morning (not strenuous exercise). Take a warm bath before retiring and learn to sip warm milk slowly as a night-cap. Adopt every possible relaxation trick you know. Try not to worry at all because worry is one of the worst weight keepers-downers. Nervousness and tenseness are contributing causes too, so school yourself to "let go."

Get more fresh air. A brisk walk for a half hour before dinner will stimulate your circulation as well as your appetite. Eat more food, more milk, cream soups, butter, cream soups, some candy, whipped cream desserts. Try hard. Soft curves are worth the effort. And, rest after every meal.

My Neighbor Says—

Young chickens are fond of milk. It is highly nutritious and promotes growth. Skim milk is excellent. If whole milk is fed it is well to dilute it with 1-3 to 1 of water.

Always keep flour in a warm, dry place. Damp flour will never make light cakes and pies.

These appeal to youngsters very much. Place ball of ice cream on a plate, dip a toothpick or small brush in melted chocolate and paint on eyes, nose and mouth, then use an inverted cone for a hat and you have a jolly clown.

Opening Lead Most Important

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Maybe this is an old story. Maybe I have told it before in this very column. (My memory is not what it used to be. Why, I even forgot an eight spot last night!) But, old or new, here it is:

It seems that a duplicate game was all ready to start when it was discovered that they were short one player. (Probably the late comer had been run over by a truck. It would take something like that to account for the nonappearance of a duplicate addict.) Rather than delay the game, the director approached a woman who obviously had intended to kibitz and asked her to fill in. She protested that she was not a good player, but this was waived aside and, after further persuasion, she took her place at a table.

The bidding was about to begin when the duplicate director saw the drafted woman beckoning to him frantically. He hurried over.

"May I ask just one question?" she whispered to him.

"Certainly," he answered.

"Which one is my partner?" was all she wanted to know!

Elderly Woman Needs Job To Keep Out of Mischief

BY DOROTHY DIX

The crying need of the day is jobs for middle-aged and elderly woman. They would stop more fights, quench more tears, ease more heartburns and do more to promote human happiness than any other thing in the world.

DOROTHY DIX

For the idle oldish woman is not only a problem, she is a pest. Having nothing else to do, she stirs up trouble wherever she goes. She wrecks more homes and causes more divorces than rivers of drink and platoon of platinum blondes. If she were malice itself she couldn't do any more harm, and the irony of the situation is that, on the contrary, she is nearly always a noble Christian character who intends nothing but good to her victims.

Her position is just one of the inevitable by-products of life. She married young and was caught up immediately in the rush and drive, turmoil and excitement, anxiety and work of making a home and rearing a family. There were twenty-five or thirty years of almost breathless struggle in helping her husband to get a start in business; in bearing children; in seeing that they were clothed and fed and educated; in nursing them through colds, measles and the whooping cough; in getting them off to college; in giving the girls debut parties and launching them in society; in answering the almost ceaseless cry for "M-o-t-h-e-r!"

During all those years the woman was happy and satisfied and busy. So busy that the day was never long enough to get through with her tasks. So busy that she did not have time even to think about anything much outside of her home. And in her way was an autocar, obeyed, deferred to, the mainspring of the home, the one about whom all the family life centered.

Then the children grew up and went about the business of life on their own homes. They married and set up houses of their own. Maybe the husband died. Then, suddenly, the woman who has been busy for so many years finds herself with nothing to do. Her hands are empty. Her only occupation is killing time, and she doesn't know how to do it. She doesn't know how to play. She has no interest in life except in her children.

And, just because she is bored and doesn't know what to do with herself, she generally goes to live with her children, even when she is financially able to maintain her own home. Then comes in the inevitable mother-in-law trouble, for unless a woman is a self-abnegating angel she cannot live in another woman's house without trying to run it and meddling in all of its affairs.

Moreover, she feels that by virtue of being Mary's or John's mother, and because she is older and has had more experience, she has a right to advise them about every detail of their lives; is offended and hurt when they refuse to make pies the had your hat on and certainly you have nothing to worry about because you failed to take it off. On the other hand, had you gone to a really formal lunch in a city like New York, and taken your hat off, that would have been conspicuous.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am writing to you to prove to a friend that she has committed an unpardonable wrong. This friend and her family were invited to dinner. Being detained on the road by car trouble, they arrived an hour after the time for dinner. Their hostess had waited a half hour and then, for the sake of the other guests, served dinner. My friend feels that she has been terribly wronged.

On the other hand, feel that it would have been so much more embarrassing had she arrived to find that every one had been made to wait, as well as the food left to dry up. Answer—Fifteen minutes grace is the definite time courtesy demands a hostess wait for a late guest, that is, fifteen minutes after the hour set for dinner. If this particular hostess had waited twenty minutes, that would have been five minutes longer than the other guests should have been expected to wait. Even though the reason for their delay was an accident, this does not change the situation.

Uncle Ray's Corner

Aden, Arabia

Near the southern end of Arabia is the city called Aden. My ship anchored in the harbor early in the morning, and I lost no time boarding a motor-boat and going ashore.

A soft drink (water) stand in Aden

Aden and a stretch of land around it form a little British colony. The area is about 75 square miles, and the population about 60,000.

Some persons believe Aden is the "Garden of Eden" described in the Bible. Certainly it does not look like an earthly paradise, either past or present. The only native product is pumice stone.

The city itself is in the crater of a volcano. That seems a strange place for a city to be, but the volcano is dead, and has not been known to erupt in historic times.

Aden's history goes back 3,000 years or more. We are told it was once a center of Phoenician trade, also that the Greeks and Romans had control of it at different times. Ethiopia won power over Aden about the year 550, and later it tell into the hands of Persia. Still later it came under power of Turkey, of Portugal and of Arab chieftains. Ninety-nine years ago this month, Great Britain took control of it, and has held it ever since.

Aden is a barren place, hot and not very healthful. It has only three inches of rainfall each year on the average.

Since it is such a barren place, why should it be looked upon as important? The chief answer is that it is a trading center. Caravans bring goods to it from many parts of Arabia—ostrich feathers, hides, dyes, lower, coffee, and so on. Boats from Africa, India and Europe come to the harbor with loads of goods which are traded for the wares of Arabia.

For along time Aden also has been important as a coaling station for ocean steamers. In recent years, it has been supplying many vessels with oil which is shipped to Aden from the wells.

In Aden there are water tanks to catch and hold all the rain water possible. These tanks are in a series, one lower than another. They were first installed 1,300 years ago. Water runs down the high sides of the volcano crater and is caught in the tanks. It is important to save water where there is as little rainfall as at Aden!

Boys in Early Teens May Do Many Startling Things

BY ANGELO PATRI

Boys in their early teens do unexpected, even startling things that apparently have no sane reason in them, yet which, if one could find the cause, are reasonable enough. They may be wrong ideas, even dangerous, but they grew out of a situation that the boy had to face and solve. In his family and friends. Given time he can explain.

Two boys were left fatherless. Their mother did her best to take the father's place, and to rear the boys as she thought he might have done. "I try always to give them as much room for self-direction as I can. They must learn how to fend for themselves, to know right from wrong in their own conscience. Sometimes they make mistakes; often I do, but this last experience has convinced me that we are on the right road. But it was a terrible one I can tell you."

"Peter, he is the older of the two, goes to prep school, a day scholar. There are many boys there who have had a great deal of freedom, and who boast about the things, the very manly things, they do. I think that was where Peter's notion started."

"We were at dinner when the bell rang. I heard Ellen open the door; heard a man's voice, then Ellen's in argument. I went to the door, 'I've a case of beer here for you, madam. The girl says it is not ordered,' he said."

"It wasn't. There is a mistake," I told him.

"No, mother, that's all right," said Peter coming down the hall. "I ordered that case of beer for myself. Take it into the kitchen, please, Ellen. I'll have a bottle of it with my dinner."

"I felt myself grow pale. My heart choked me and I almost leaped against the wall, but managed to hide it and go back to the table. Peter seemed to take it all as matter of course. He poured out the beer, tasted it, then said, 'Will you have some, mother?'"

"No," I said, "I don't like it."

"Peter took another mouthful; swallowed it thoughtfully, licked his mouth, tasted a couple of times and said, 'I don't see anything about that to go to town for.'"

"Let me taste it," said little John. "Ood! What stuff. It's sour as swill!"

"The school, mother, Disney and that crowd, told me it was swell and that they drank loads of it every mealtime. They can have it."

"That was all for that, but I was never so frightened in all my life. But it was worth it. I know now that beer won't have any thrills for Peter. It will be just another drink and one that he can do without. If I had made a scene and sent the beer back he would have resented it and felt that he had been affronted and treated like an infant. You see I've been trying to make him head the house as his father would have done, and I had to see it through."

Sometimes a boy does something that frightens his people, but which, upon investigation, is only a demonstration of interest, an experiment. Move slowly where you cannot see the way.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Water Board Is Planning Change In Rate Schedule

Thorough Investigation Will Precede Action, Clerk Says

Neenah—The Neenah Waterworks commission is currently contemplating changing rate schedules in order to sell more water during the present year, City Clerk H. S. Zemlock, who is secretary of the commission, stated today.

An apparent need in changing rate schedules is evidenced in the city clerk's annual water meter sales report for 1937 during which a large decrease from the preceding year of patrons was noted in the minimum classification, those using less than 3,000 gallons of water a month. The minimum rate is $2 a month.

Stating that the less water sold the greater is the cost per gallon to operate the city's water supply system, the city clerk explained that expenses of operating the water works are fixed with the exception of chemicals and electricity.

While there is a decrease in the first classification, there is a large increase in the number of patrons in the second classification, those consuming 3,000 to 10,000 gallons of water a month, and still a larger increase in the number of patrons in the third classification, those using 10,000 to 50,000 gallons a month, the city clerk pointed out in showing the difference in sales classifications during the year.

Fewer in First Bracket
During December of 1936 there were 613 residential patrons in the first classification using 1,367,300 gallons of water, while in December of last year there were only 384 residential patrons using 815,750 gallons. In the same classification, there were 45 commercial patrons using 82,350 gallons of water during December of 1936, while the number decreased to 40 using 78,600 gallons during December of 1937. A similar decrease was noted as far as industrial users of water were concerned.

Pointing out that a large number of patrons were shifted to the second classification last year, Zemlock said that in December of 1936 there were 1,363 residential patrons using 7,301,350 gallons, while in December of last year the number increased to 1,496 patrons consuming 10,193,350 gallons. There were also increases in industrial and commercial consumers in this classification.

The most predominant shift, however, took place into the third classification, those using 10,000 to 50,000 gallons a month, when 159 residential consumers used 2,497,250 gallons during December, 1936, as compared with 351 using 5,332,450 in December, 1937. Similar increases in this classification were noted in commercial and industrial consumers.

The city clerk added, however, that a complete survey has not been made and until a thorough investigation is completed the contemplated change in rate schedules will not be made.

Adopt New Schedule At Menasha Library

Menasha—Continuous service at the Eliza D. Smith public library from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. will be inaugurated next Monday. The new schedule has been adopted in the belief that having the library open to the public during the noon hour, with a librarian in attendance at the desk, will provide an opportunity for many people to use its facilities who could not otherwise do so.

Ten daily newspapers, including local and metropolitan papers and 72 weekly and monthly magazines are available at the library.

Due to the completion of classrooms in the new Menasha High school building, classes are no longer being held at the library, so that patrons will find ample opportunity to use the main reading room freely.

The children's department will be open as usual from 3 to 6 p. m. on week days and from 10 a. m. to 12 noon and from 2 to 6 p. m. on Saturdays. The regular children's story hour will be held at 2:30 this Saturday at the library. Animal stories will be told by Mrs. B. A. Berglund.

Citizens' Groups Help in Drive to Reduce Accidents

Northeastern Wisconsin
Counties Active. Safety
Director Reports

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—The efforts of voluntary citizens' groups in many Wisconsin cities and almost all counties toward the reduction of highway traffic hazards and fatalities and their cooperation in the state's campaign to promote highway safety were cited Wednesday by West A. Burdick, director of safety for the state highway commission.

Throughout Wisconsin groups of citizens are serving without pay in county and local safety organizations which are doing much toward educating the motoring public to realize the disastrous results of carelessness and incompetence of automobile drivers on the public highways.

Two counties in the northeastern section were first to inaugurate the "vigilante" system in their county safety council activities. Credit for the origination of this plan goes to the Door county safety council, which is headed by R. B. Bierl, chairman, and R. C. Smith, secretary.

In this system volunteer informers or "spotters" turn in reports of traffic violations to the county council, which in turn sends a mimeographed form notice to the offender, letting him know that he has been detected, and threatening court prosecution unless he mends his ways.

Both Door and Shawano counties have produced satisfactory results through this novel method, state highway safety officers report. Head of the Shawano county safety council is F. C. Siebert.

Other counties in the northeastern section are also active, the commission points out. Calumet county, under the leadership of Ray Jensen, county highway commissioner, is now completing a series of safety programs in all the schools of the county. Safety slides are also a part of every theatre program there.

In Outagamie county, the commission pointed out, the Kaukauna Policemen's Protective association headed by Oscar Johns, is planning a series of safety meetings in February in several county communities, while the county safety council recently raised funds for the purchase of a moving picture projector which will be used in further educational work. Films are obtained from the state highway commission.

The traffic accident clock on the grounds of the Brown county courthouse was cited as a distinctive phase of that county's safety education efforts. The state highway commission recently made moving pictures of the device for showing throughout the state.

Burdick also praised the efforts of members of the Elks lodges in Winnebago county in furthering highway safety through the organization of a safe drivers' league. Headed by R. G. DuCharme of Menasha and H. W. Nankervis of Oshkosh, this organization is also working toward the reduction of road hazards in the county.

The evening's entertainment will include a dance at the armory, the music to be furnished by the Sawyer Co-op orchestra of this city which will also render selections at the afternoon session.

HOW DOES PIGGLY WIGGLY WORK?
Let's see how Piggly Wiggly works as a home-owned Wisconsin organization. Five years ago Piggly Wiggly was unknown in the eastern half of Wisconsin. Two brothers started their first store under this system at Wausau. Now they own and operate 16 stores in this part of the state, with a modern warehouse at Oshkosh and fast trucks to insure speedy deliveries to all of their stores.
This is no big chain . . . far from it . . . this is proof that American initiative can succeed, and that Wisconsin people appreciate such initiative. Starting from one store, now it's 16—but those sixteen stores have saved thousands and thousands of dollars for customers, employ almost a hundred native Wisconsin, pay their share of the State and municipal taxes—are, in short, a worth while part of the communities where they operate and of the greater community, the State of Wisconsin.

Office of Ickes' Aid Reduced to Skeleton

Basis in Washington
Washington—Interior department officials disclosed today that the office of Charles West, undersecretary, had been reduced to a skeleton basis.

West was not in today, but inquiry showed his staff of five had been reduced to a receptionist and a stenographer.

The reason, it was said, was chiefly because the office long had been in "disuse."

A former member of the house from Ohio, West has been President Roosevelt's "contact man" on Capitol Hill.

The senate public lands committee started an investigation of activities at the interior department 10 days ago, delving, among other things, into allegation of "wire-tapping."

The inquiry was in connection with the appointment of Ebert K. Burlew as assistant secretary. Secretary Ickes was one of the witnesses.

Reports have been current that there was friction between Ickes and West, who, it was said today, has not been going to his office regularly in recent days. West is a presidential appointee.

Interior officials said James Rohrer, West's brother-in-law and his official assistant, was one of those no longer connected with the undersecretary's office.

EMPIRE FOR A LADY

BY ALAN LEMAY

SYNOPSIS: A widespread revolt of savage Dyak tribes makes it impossible for my uncle, James Clyde, to run any guns to the besieged rajah, his client. A further complication is the presence of the Forresters' yawl, the Avon, in the tropical waters of Balingong bay. Clyde tries to persuade Christine, a young English girl, and her brother Robert, to leave the danger spot. Christine blankly refuses. She is completing a "plan" of her dead father.

Chapter Five: Lower Away!

"I wish," Clyde said with irritation, "that you would stop gabbling about 'her.' I see no reason to believe that Robert Forrester isn't running this show, just as he pretends."

This was so silly that it needed no reply. I said, "I still don't see their father as a gun-runner. I've read some of his monographs, and there isn't--"

"Of course Anthony Forrester wasn't a gun-runner. Anything so practical would have bounced off his head. But he knew the island of Sumatlang--Heaven, he was in Sumatlang's way around here enough so that he ought to have known it. Now this half-baked boy of his finds himself broke, and with the old man out of the way he thinks he'll make a quick use of what the old man knew. That's all there is to that."

"It still doesn't explain Christine's attitude," I insisted doggedly. "There's something queer about this business; it just doesn't fit together. She ought to be glad to join you instead of shying off like she does."

"I've cleared up the whole thing in my own mind," my uncle said abruptly. "What makes it look queer is that they don't know their own game. Well, that's their lookout. To hell with them! Rout out your port watch, and get ready to lower away."

"You going back to the Avon?"

"Certainly not! I'm going up that river."

Sooner or later I had known it would come and this was it. "Rajah Mantusen is alive," I said, "he's boxed in; because if he wasn't boxed in we'd have heard from him by now. And if he's boxed in by his jungle runners can't get out, then we can't get in."

"How do you know we can't get in?" he shouted at me. "We'll feel our way. If the going gets tough we'll turn around and come back."

There you are That was Clyde. It seemed to me that in all my life I had never heard a plainer plan of suicide. There would be log-booms chained across the Siderong river; some of them would open for us--then close behind. There would be a rain of spears; 100 praus might be ready to close with us hand to hand. But Clyde was going in, and if he couldn't get through he planned to just turn around and come back. Maybe he was coming back.

Clyde's Orders

"Sir," I said, "if we go into the Siderong, I suppose you realize we're not coming out."

He looked at me with a brief quick widening of the eyes. "Mr. Forrester, you will remember your place. I've told you to break out your port watch. Now move!"

Silence, for a minute. Already we were getting accustomed to the everlasting hammer of the distant gongs; so that now what we heard was the little whispering of the sea upon the quiet reef. It seemed to me a beautiful sound, cool and free, and the open sea a homelike, and desirable place. Who could want to leave it for the river, with its dark and sticky heat, and its myriad waiting blades to assure that he would never leave that hole again?

I stood up. A bosun's pipe isn't used in a place like the bay of Balingong. Why advertise to a hostile shore that you are about to do something? And besides, everybody is on deck, hunting a breath of air in whatever shade he can find. I hardly raised my voice.

"Port watch. Stand by to lower away."

Sprawled figures began to move. The bosun jumped up with the cricket-like yip of motion he had, and went around waking up some who had gone to sleep.

"I turned back to my uncle. "I had the arms stowed in the whaleboat while you were asleep this morning," Clyde answered drily. "Mind your own duties, and try to keep up to scratch for a change; it'll give you enough to do."

The port watch began to struggle up--half a dozen common seamen as nondescript as any you would want to find. Not one among them that you would have marked, unless for outstanding drunkenness.

Hollywood

Sights and Sounds

BY ROBBIN COONS
Hollywood — Barring an extra's complete oblivion, the greatest anonymity in Hollywood is enjoyed by the girl who plays "second leads."

Margaret Lindsay

She can be well-known indeed, she can be beautiful and a fine actress, she can be as agreeable and pleasant and surprising as ice water at a cocktail bar, but in the Hollywood spotlight she just isn't. Why this should be isn't clear, unless you fall back on the obvious, which isn't necessarily true. As a second lead, she's always eclipsed by the greater glitter of the star.

Some of us were luminating on this circumstance the other day, and the name of Margaret Lindsay arose as the perfect example.

Say "Margaret Lindsay" in any gathering of movie reporters and they'll all think—"Oh, yes, the girl who got into pictures by pretending she was British."

Same Old Story

That's been the "angle" on Margaret for five years now — ever since she fooled her way into the all-English cast of "Cavalcade." For about two years the publicity men at Warner's have been doing their best to change that angle—you can't blame Margaret for weeping of it—but they've had no luck. Often, they themselves give up and start their stories with: "When Margaret knee of Dubuque, Iowa, was unable to crash pictures as an American," etc.

Other "angles" that have found their way into print on the Lindsay girl have been few. It has been dutifully recorded that she and Janet Gaynor are good friends, that she attended the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York City, that she sculptures a little, that she is fond of vacations in Mexico, adores Hawaii, and so on. Once her adoration reached the point where she planned to buy an island, but to date there's no deed of transfer recorded. She dresses smartly, is a favorite companion of some of the colony's most eligible young men; she makes a nice salary, puts enough of it away, and keeps on playing second leads with an occasional first lead in second-sting pictures.

Margaret Objected

Among her workers she is rated very easy to get along with, an excellent actress, a sincere and hard-working performer, intelligent and sympathetic. About the only occasion on which her nice disposition was ruffled arose because of a publicity man's desire to depart from the she-said-she-was-English angle. The young man, going into communion with himself, produced a little squib to the effect that Miss Lindsay, when troubled with a sore throat, always found prompt relief in gargling hot beer!

This item found its way to print, and in due course to Miss Lindsay's eyes. She lost no time in mailing the canard, which ranks for truth along with Paul Muni's board room, many of Errol Flynn's wild adventures, and Humphrey Bogart's habit of wearing his shoes on the wrong foot in order to achieve realistic expressions of pain.

slouching along any waterfront of the world. To us, though, they were individuals, intimately known, each useful within limits that could be accurately foreseen.

In a sense, that crew was the scrapings of every wharf, in the Orient. Yet it had one great distinction—there were no Laskars in it, no Kanakas. Undoubtedly Clyde could have shipped a crew of Malays that would have been cleaner and better men, better seamen. But he coggedly stuck to one principle in his crew—that in a pinch a white man was of peculiar value in those seas.

"Get this tub over," my uncle said, and they moved to free the falls. "Come on and get your clothes on, Paul."

We put on shoes, shirts, and white jackets with plain brass buttons as large as a dollar. It was our standard uniform for dealing with the lesser rajahs, and we never used it for anything else.

As we came on deck, John Blair, the second mate, was standing by the falls. The whaleboat was already in the water. Blair's muddy-skinned face had a permanent grim, deary set to it, as of disgust. "Any special orders, sir?" he asked.

"There's a first class chance you're about to get your throats cut," my uncle said. "Better drop a round shot across the bow of any war canoe that shows itself by daylight. At dark, draw your round shot, and load with grape."

"Aye, sir," Clyde slung himself over the

Social Hygiene Association in Drive on Disease

State Medical Association Outlines Educational Program

Madison — "Less than one out of every hundred people in Wisconsin has syphilis" the state medical society states in its health bulletin this week, in which it explains the program of the American Social Hygiene association in its drive to educate the public on the subject of venereal disease.

"A decrease in the number of cases of syphilis has been brought about through advances in medical science as well as through the cooperation of individual practicing physicians and public health officials. The decrease in the number of cases has been possible also due to the discovery of a specific remedy now used universally by doctors in treating the disease.

"The second National Social Hygiene Day will be held on Feb. 2, and has for its slogan 'Stamp out syphilis—the enemy of youth.' This day will be devoted locally and nationally to publicity about syphilis and how it can be stamped out. The American Social Hygiene association has been working in this field for many years, with a budget derived from memberships, contributions, and grants. The public interest in syphilis has greatly increased the demands on the association for information by mail, for publications and for other responses to public interest.

Directed to Young

"Emphasis, in publicity and program, will be the menace of the venereal diseases to youth. The greatest sufferers from gonorrhea and syphilis are the young people, and the nation-wide educational program is to be directed to them in a manner which should decrease the prevalence of the venereal diseases among them.

"Of the many new cases of syphilis discovered in Wisconsin each year, one in six is found among youngsters under twenty years of age. More amazing is the fact that nearly half of all new syphilis infections are contracted by individuals between twenty and thirty years of age. Yet this age group represents only one-sixth of the total population.

"The determination of whether or not syphilis is present is a simple procedure. All that is required is a small quantity of blood to be taken from the vein of an individual. This is subjected to accurate laboratory tests. The test is made by a physician and the results of the test are always maintained in the strictest of confidence by the physician.

"Young people are learning the truth about these diseases and are accepting the challenge to fight these foes of health and happiness. Parents, youth leaders, social hygiene agencies and health authorities see the great need, backed by an awakened public opinion, for years, of age. Yet this age group successfully attacking this enemy."
